o'clock Friday evening. Another sheep herder told of the Mexican's declared intention of going to the road-house. Just why the Mexican had accompanied a woman from the road-house to the Knott ranch was not ascertained, but they were heading in the direction of the sheep herder's camp.

A coroner's inquest will be held Friday.

CRESCENT, Sept. 5.—Deputy Sheriff E. G. O'Rourke left here to investigate a murder, reported to have been committed at Beaver marsh last night. No details are known except that a murder at that place was reported by occupants of a Hudson car which passed through here during today. Beaver marsh is 27 miles south of Crescent. O'Rourke was accompanied on his trip of investigation by Roy Mallory.

A tramp, name unknown, who passed through here Wednesday night, south bound, is believed by local people to have committed the crime, but this belief is based solely on his actions while here.

Walter Mallory, a brother of Roy, states that the traveler objected to the charge of $1, made for a meal, and drew a revolver on him and his brother, during the argument which followed.

Later information was to the effect that the murdered man was a sheep herder.
