

ANOTHER I. W. W. STRONGHOLD IS UPROOTED HERE

Raid on Home of Mrs. Ben Bond Discloses Propaganda Headquarters

Another nest for the breeding and distribution of I. W. W. propaganda was dislodged yesterday noon when three of Sheriff Low's deputies, Sam Walker, Marion Hargens and C. C. Low, raided the residence of Mrs. Ben Bond, 335 Jefferson, near Third. A large quantity of red literature, letters and the I. W. W. membership cards of Mrs. Bond and her sister, Vera Moeller, were seized. This raid was followed by another late in the afternoon on the Country Club rooming house on East Main, which was conducted by the same officers and Deputy H. E. Meads. A quantity of literature was found in the room of one of the lodgers. No arrests were made in either raid.

Mrs. Bond Active Worker
Letters found in the Bond residence disclosed that Mrs. Bond has been an active I. W. W. worker. Under the guise of a "Christian worker," she had frequently gained access to the city jail where the six I. W. W. prisoners are held, acting as a messenger for leaders of the organization in Tacoma. In one of the letters from Hazel Graves, 720 S. L. street, Tacoma, Mrs. Bond is warmly praised for her deception.

"I certainly admire your nerve in going to the jail as a church worker," said the writer. "I wish I had a few thousand more like you. But the rebel women are so few."
The letters were mostly written in a rambling fashion, the writers seldom failing to tell how busy they were, or to quote a bit of poetry which they modestly claimed as their own creation. A. Kohn, Tacoma, said he was flooding Klamath with literature. He said he had mailed 400 copies of the booklet, "Was It Murder?", which is an attempt to justify the murder of ex-service men in Centralia on Armistice Day, 1919. He would mail as many more booklets which would be followed by 700 follow-up letters, he wrote Mrs. Bond.

Predictions Were Vague
Kohn used freely the terms "revolution," "class struggle" and the like. He predicted "victory within the next 25 years, probably sooner," but was vague in his definition of what the victory would embrace. His letters told of the attempt to arouse sympathy for the I. W. W. held here by means of literature and letters. In preparation for the trial which has been set for early in October.

Mrs. Bond was advised that booklets had been shipped which she was to sell at a stipulated price to net her 80 cents, the writer advising her to be sure she broke even on the sale. The booklets were found in the Bond residence.

Mrs. Bond a Domestic
Mrs. Bond has been employed as a domestic by prominent families of this city. When the raid was made yesterday she was at the residence of Judge A. L. Leavitt on Conger avenue. How long she has been an active I. W. W. is not certain, but her membership card shows dues paid for September and October. The same was true of Vera Moeller's card. Both were designated on their cards as cooks.

That yesterday's raids would be followed by others, and probably by several arrests, was intimated by Sheriff Low. An ex-service man himself, the sheriff has not forgotten the Centralia massacre, and between his office and the city police, it is understood, no stones will be left unturned in uprooting any foothold the I. W. W. may have gained here.

I. W. W. in San Quentin
About 40 I. W. W. are serving terms in San Quentin prison following their conviction under the California criminal syndicalism law. Ten of these recently staged a strike as a protest against having to work in the Jute factory. The strike was called off soon after the 10 were lodged in the dungeon on a bread and water diet.

EARLY RESIDENTS OF KLAMATH BACK TO VISIT FRIENDS

First White Child, Man Who Planted Courthouse Trees and Corn Expert Among Visitors

Klamath today is honored by the presence of three pioneer residents, Mrs. Sam Parker of Sacramento, Judge J. S. Orr of Reno and Henry Newham of San Jose, California.

Mrs. Parker was the first white child in Klamath county and held that distinction until 1875. She was a childhood chum of Mrs. Henrietta Melrose with whom she and Mr. Parker are now visiting. During the Modoc war she narrowly escaped massacre by the Indians.

Judge Orr owns the distinction of having planted in the courthouse yard, 20 years ago, the poplar trees which since have become among the largest in the city. At that time Judge Orr was in no danger of injunction or other legal proceedings. He is visiting his brother, Marshall Orr of Lorella, and old friends.

Newham, a Civil war veteran, won fame for the excellent corn he grew here in the early days. His corn was known from one end of the county to the other and was in strong demand. He is visiting his son, James Newham, who has a farm out on the Merrill road.

WILL REPAIR SIXTH

City Prepares for Heavy Traffic to County Fair

Repairing of Sixth street to the city limits will be undertaken by the city to prepare for the county fair, W. O. Smith of the street committee of the city council said today. Authority to act in this matter was given the committee at the council meeting Monday.

The holes will be filled and the street surfaced 20 feet wide with bitulith. From the city limits to the fair grounds, or to the end of the paving, repairing will be undertaken by the state highway department. Oregon avenue will be repaired later in the season when equipment is available.

The bad holes on Sixth street have long been a source of annoyance to motorists but the need for repairs became more pressing in view of the heavy traffic which the county fair will develop.

Paving of Fourth street and other streets up the hill from Pine will be started within a day or two.

GRAPHIC STORY OF RESCUE WORK TOLD BY CORNISH MINER

Lights Were Blown Out By Strong Blast of Air When First Hole Was Made In Barrier

JACKSON, Sept. 20.—A story out of the 3600-foot level, the tale of that moment when the first hole was punched in the barrier of the Argonaut, was related today by Tommy Penrose, Cornish miner.

"As soon as I felt the whip of air rush past me I knew we had broken through," Penrose said, "and started back the drift to close the door. I was going as fast as I could when I met a foreman.

"Get back there and shut the door after you. For God's sake get back," the foreman yelled. I answered him, "That is what I'm doing, shutting the door. You see, the other fellows, being mostly foreigners, had not understood the necessity of cutting off the draft."

Miners' Lights Went Out
"Pop, out went all the lights on the miners' caps. That was some wind. We were in the dark and when I shut the door they were able to light up again. Two men held the door. On the roof of the tunnel where the hole stretched through there was a whirling mass of muck and water. It swirled right there, the force of the air churning up the stuff. The hole became larger and it was made so without any work from us for the wind tore out the soft stuff.

"Then we had to clear away the muck and the crew that followed us took in timbers and made the way safe.

"Down there every time we blasted there was no smoke because the wind going into the Kennedy carried it away. That is why we could work fast. We set off a blast and jumped in right away to pick down loose rock and set up the machine drills."

Miners For Ten Generations
Ten generations of the Penrose family have been underground miners. Tommy says he has tried many other trades but always returns. He says he doesn't like the work and would rather go prospecting, but somehow or other he always gets back to the drift and shafts.

EUROPE SEETHS OVER QUESTION OF NEAR EAST

France and England Attempt Agreement; Invasion of Gallipoli Looms

PARIS, Sept. 20.—An agreement between Great Britain and France on the Near East problem seemed reasonably assured after a two and one-half hour conversation between Premier Poincare and Lord Curzon, British foreign secretary, today.

Great Britain had threatened to institute a drive against the Turks as a result of the Turk invasion of neutral territory and the massacre of thousands of Christians in Smyrna. This policy was opposed by the French, who advised conference measures.

According to advisers from well-informed circles, the Russian bolsheviks have been for a long time transferring considerable quantities of gold and precious stones to help equip the army of Kemal Pasha, leader of the invading Turks.

Official confirmation was received today that the French had withdrawn their troops from Chanak and that the Italians were apparently doing the same. The British force alone remaining at that point.

WATCH FOR WHITE PINE BLISTER RUST IS BUREAU WARNING

Disease Has Foothold in Northwest and Many Spread Southward, Pathologists Say

Lumbermen, horticulturists, school children and other agencies are asked to keep a watchful eye on Oregon for the first development of white pine blister rust, a disease that has a foothold in British Columbia and northwestern Washington, and, unless checked, is feared will spread southward along the coast.

C. R. Stillinger, pathologist of the blister rust control bureau at Seattle, says currants and gooseberries show the disease readily at this season of the year, and asks for a general examination of these plants, as well as forest trees, in Oregon.

In order to check the spread of the disease, says Stillinger it is necessary to determine the extent of the present distribution immediately. To this end the general co-operation in looking for the first evidence of the disease is asked.

Local reports of any suspicious cases, with specimens of leaves, may be submitted to the chamber of commerce or sent to C. R. Stillinger, 423 Lyon Building, Seattle.

CLUB WORK HELPFUL

Dairy Herd Record Study Aids Summers Boys Build Up Herd

By BRYANT WILLIAMS
Early in February 1922 we organized the Summers Dairy Record club. We chose our teacher, Mr. Wilcox, as club leader. We held the first meeting when we organized, and I was chosen president. Richard Robustell was named vice-president and Charles Wilcox secretary. We test on an average of three times a month. Most everyone in the club kept records of two cows.

I was in the testing club last year, and found it was very interesting from the start. But more than that, it taught me to keep records of our herd. I found that we had a cow that was not paying so she was sold to the butcher.

I am keeping records of our entire herd now and intend to keep on testing after my club work is done. I have my own testing outfit at my home and we expect to weed out low producers as fast as we can.

We have 10 members in our club. Last year our dairy herd records won the first five prizes at the state fair, and we are going to exhibit them again this year.

BODIES BEING REMOVED FROM ARGONAUT MINE

Nine Brought to Surface Are Identified; Work Will End Tonight

JACKSON, Sept. 20.—All the bodies of the 47 Argonaut miners will be taken out of the mine today or tonight, it was announced today.

Nine bodies were brought out yesterday, after which a halt was called to permit the rescue crew to recuperate. The crew had been more successful than was hoped for, under the adverse working conditions, and the need for a rest was declared essential.

All the nine bodies were identified, including that of Ernest Miller, formerly of Seattle, and who has relatives in Portland.

The note found on one of the bodies read as follows: "J. A. M. gas bad."

This was the first clue which told the rescuers the length of time the men had lived after the disaster of August 27, when the Argonaut shaft caught afire.
