

GREENWICH VILLAGE HAPPY AGAIN

Sonia, the Cigarette Girl, Recovers From Strange And Dangerous Illness

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Greenwich Village, that Bohemian center regarded as a perpetual fountain of mirth, for a time was threatened with its little tragedy, but now the tale has taken a new turn and the happy ending is in sight.

A few weeks ago Sonia the cigarette girl was stricken desperately ill. Heart disease, a strange form, the doctors said.

For weeks she lay in a hospital ward, pale and wan. And very lonely was Sonia, for she found that her village friends, the poets and painters who laughed with her and blew smoke rings with her in cellar and garret, had deserted her. On the walls were none of the gay tapestries, the paintings and sketches in which she delighted. The sounds which came to her were ominous sounds, lacking the music and laughter which to her had constituted life.

Sonia is only in her twenties. Youth rebels at grim hospital walls and white-clad doctors and nurses, with their stethoscopes and mysterious charts.

But now doctors say that Sonia has won her fight—that soon she will be discharged.

Everyone knows Sonia in the village. In her smock and sandals, she could be seen any day walking bare-headed through the alleys of the Latin quarter, shaking her bobbed-hair violently when engaged in argument over Helles Lettres or the theories of Freud.

Sonia—she has a last name but in the village she is known only as Sonia—is a Bohemian. Thousands of out-of-towners who have visited the village have seen her slipping from table to table in the fantastic tea-rooms which the village boasts, cajoling the merry-makers into buying a package of her cigarettes.

Sonia is versatile. Now she would make a little money at one thing, at other times at another. Sometimes she would make nothing at all.

Once she went to Boston and there staged a Bohemian dance largely attended by Harvard undergraduates. Arrangements went a bit awry, the dance was not wholly a success, and the police reserves had to be called.

A few months ago she opened a little shop of her own in the village. To her stock of cigarettes she added erudite tomes and fanciful batiks.

Then she was stricken. Her acquaintances tried to find her family. They were all dead, she said. She smiled mysteriously whenever she was asked whence she had hailed. She just appeared one day in the village. Tradition has it that her homeland was Russia.

"It isn't so much that I'm down and out," she said bravely. "It's that the village folks don't come to see me."

"Yes, I know, the village is away up in Provincetown and Croton. But they might send me word or have dropped in to see me before they went."

PREDICTS PLANE WITHOUT MOTOR

Engineer Says Invention Will Enable Flyers to Ascend 20,000 Feet

CLEVELAND, Sept. 26.—A motorless airplane, capable of climbing to an altitude of 20,000 feet, is forecast by Dr. George H. Madelung, designer of the successful Hanover glider, which, in a recent glider competition in the Rhone valley, broke all records by staying in the air for more than three hours.

Dr. Madelung now is a member of the designing staff of a local airplane company. Describing the phenomenal development of the machine, in Germany, he explained its operation.

The machine has a gliding angle of sixteen to one, that is, in still air it glides sixteen feet to every foot it descends. It has a still air speed of twenty miles an hour. The wind is twenty miles an hour, the glider remains stationary, and if more than that, it goes backwards, but if the air current is upward, the glider ascends. It is upward currents of air that the glider places main dependence for keeping aloft for more than brief periods.

In sailing for a considerable distance the glider pilot must know approximately where he will encounter upward currents. Plowed fields and other open spaces where the heat of the sun creates a considerable up current, are favorable places. It is for this reason that the charting of the air currents has become necessary for the commercial development of the glider.

When the planes along a certain route where air current may be encountered become known, flights of hundreds of miles and ascents of more than four miles may be accomplished, Dr. Madelung said.

He pointed to the hawk and other soaring birds as an illustration. The hawk will sail down to a field, whence it will cycle in ascent, forced upward by the rising air caused by the reflected heat of the field. When it has reached a sufficient altitude it soars away, to repeat the process miles away.

In this connecting, Dr. Madelung commented, that the hawks and other soaring birds do not fly at night stating that the reason is because all air currents are downward at night. Night flying is impossible with gliders for the same reason, Dr. Madelung said.

With the application of the principles discovered in gliding a new type of airplane, far more efficient and safe than the present types, will result, Dr. Madelung believes. Dr. Madelung's designs are being used extensively in the construction here of a new type of seaplane. It will have a wing design similar to that of the Hanover glider to be used by the United States navy.

Dr. Madelung was assistant engineer before the war, in the German Institute of aeronautical research at Aldershoff. He was called to the front as a pilot but was later recalled to Aldershoff.

Queen Marie Decides To Postpone Her Visit

BUCHAREST, Sept. 26.—Queen Marie of Rumania has decided to put off her long-contemplated trip to United States. The chief reason is Rumania's acute financial position. "We are very poor," says the queen, "and it would not be right to ask the government to meet the expenses of such a long journey. I am trying to set a good example of frugality and economy. I have cancelled the orders for my coronation gowns. My daughters and I are wearing last year's clothes, and we are saving every penny. Hence I must give up the idea of going to the United States."
