EGYPT TROUBLED
BY ACTIVITIES OF YOUNG POLITICIANS

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 20.—The inauguration of a strict policy by the Egyptian government to deal with the fanatical enthusiasm of the school boy politicians is regarded by all the native papers as a necessity of the hour. If the Egyptian political and educational structures are to be saved from disruption.

The students in the universities and high schools of the country who came forward last year and joined in street demonstrations to help win political freedom for Egypt, have now developed a new movement which seems to be a general revolt against all existing customs that conflict with their own personal aggrandisement.

The students, conscious of their power, have turned their energies to eliminating examinations. Their political slogan a year ago was: "We do not want the English." Today they are shouting: "We want no more examinations." And they are keen enough to plan a campaign which will use politics as a lever to make easier their classroom work.

The elections for members of the new parliament are set for October. The students aim to see that only candidates who heed their demands are returned to both houses. Their election cries are now being tried out in this wise: "Vote for Mahmud Bey and no examinations."

Who Sold?
Him This!

From north, south, east and west the roads to Klamath Falls pass artistically colored and strikingly prominent bill boards. The erection of each one of these has required a considerable outlay of money and with each change of face requires another expenditure by no means small.

Day by day, week by week, and in many cases even month by month these bill boards tell the same story. A daily change would cost so much that it would be prohibitive. No merchant can be talked into paying it, yet the small advertising value of the bill board is dependent upon its new face. This means that at no time is the value in the display given. The use of the bill board depends upon the ability of some salesman to unload it on a merchant.

That is why about the only comment caused by the bill board is the question.
