Kiddies With Curley Hair and Without Any Hair At All Appear In Large Numbers

Babies with curly hair, babies with out any sign of hair, babies that toddled along beside proud mothers and wee tots; and all in all the sweetest, healthiest lot of babies the public of Klamath Falls has ever had the privilege of seeing gathered into one room, were out this morning for the annual Klamath Falls baby clinic.

The steady stream of women and babies going into the courthouse this morning and afternoon gave the grave, quiet halls of justice an unusual appearance. The participants in the clinic were greeted at the main entrance by Mrs. R. J. Sheets and Mrs. Jennie Hurn, who directed them to the basement where the clinic was progressing.

Up until noon today 33 of Klamath's heirs and heiresses had been examined for adenoids, bad teeth, weak eyes and general perfection, and with the opening of the rooms again at 1 o'clock the number was easily doubled in the first hour.

Women under the direction of Mrs. H. R. Harrison had arranged the rooms so that some semblance of comfort was created in dull, cold-looking basement. Flowers were contributed by Mrs. Charles L. Moore and others from their home flower gardens. Henline and Stinson photo shops assisted with donations of baby pictures. Moe's and the Golden Rule has booths fitted up with complete layettes, and the Square Deal drug store displayed medical supplies necessary to the comfort of baby.

Local physicians took turns examining the children and giving lectures.

Mason, Mrs. W. R. Boyd, Dr. Estrella Ford Warner, medical director of state hygiene, of Portland; and Mrs. G. Blakely, state advisory nurse.
