

ARTIFICIAL PEARLS
GROWN BY JAPANESE
DEFY ALL EXPERTS

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Owners in Paris of valuable strings of pearls have been thrown into something like consternation by the published opinion of Dr. Louis Boutan, professor of science at the University of Bordeaux and an expert in pearls, that he and other pearl experts are unable to distinguish between real pearls and those artificially grown by the Japanese. The statement of Dr. Boutan, made at the French academy of sciences, removes the last doubt concerning Japanese pearls, which have been grown in quality since M. Mikimoto, the Japanese scientist made his discovery.

Pearls normally are grown by accident, through a fine grain or sand entering the shell of the oyster. The white substance, called a pearl, grows inside the oyster and is a secretion caused by the effort of the shell fish to get rid of the foreign substance. Mikimoto conceived the idea of opening oysters and inserting the foreign substance, or grain of sand, that formerly came there accidentally.

Since Japanese began to grow pearls artificially, there has been much discussion as to whether these new pearls would affect the value of the accidentally grown pearls. The only difference would appear to be in the pear seed, or grain of sand, and now it is claimed by Dr. Boutan that even this difference cannot be detected.

The statement of Dr. Boutan is categorical: "If I did not have a certificate of origin when sections of pearls were shown me, pearls cut into sections for testing purposes, I would not be able to say which pearl is artificial."
