

UNION PACIFIC WOULD DESTROY S. P., IS CHARGE

Railroad Man Attacks Rival Line; Holds Klamath Is Being Mised

"The destruction of the Southern Pacific system is the sole object of the Union Pacific in its activities around Klamath Falls," said J. A. Ormandy, assistant general passenger agent of the southern Pacific who has just arrived in the city by way of Crater Lake.

"Some of the good people of this community are being misled into signing a petition which is intended as a blow at the existence of our system."

The Union Pacific petition is not in the interest of Klamath county at all," continued Ormandy. "In fact the general attorney for that company on two occasions for that company in two cases to my personal knowledge by public utterance declared the Union Pacific to be opposed to the building of the railroad from Klamath Falls to Westwood Junction, which we all know is one of the things needed for the development and prosperity of this county."

The Southern Pacific is prepared to spend $11,000,000 to complete the Salem cut-off just as soon as its title to the Central Pacific is established by federal authority, declared Ormandy.

"The line to Westwood Junction must of necessity follow in the development of our system."

The interests of Klamath county, he said, lie with the Southern Pacific. In the completion of these two projects. An independent Central Pacific for which the agents of the Union Pacific claim to be working would in his judgment never build either of these lines."

"The Southern Pacific is an institution of Klamath county," Ormandy said. "We built into this county and have carried the weight of a large investment for many years. Now the despoiler is at our door seeking to destroy us. We ask the citizens of Klamath Falls to consider their own interests and refuse to be deceived by an innocent looking petition intended as a body blow to Klamath county as well as the Southern Pacific."

BUREAU BOGEY AGAIN

American City Men Wanted $7,000;
Will Get $3,000

The American City bureau bogey popped up again Wednesday night when a representative of that organization appeared at a special meeting of the chamber of commerce board of directors.

The representative had come all the way from New York, it was said, to get the money he believed was due the bureau. He said the chamber owed the bureau about $7,000 and he wanted to know when he could get it. Of this amount about $4,000 was said to have been due this week. Only $300 had been paid under the original agreement.

In setting up his case, the representative alleged that the chamber had collected $15,000 as a result of the drive staged by the bureau. Why, he wanted to know, had not the bureau been paid.

Apparently, however, the bureau representative did not fully expect to get $7,000. After a lengthy argument he agreed to cancel the original contract and to take $3,000, in three annual installments, for his claim.

STOLE STILL FROM UNCLE SAM, CHARGE AGAINST INDIAN

Warren Ruff Stated for Hearing
Before Commissioner Saturday;
Two Others Are Held

Stealing is stealing, but when one steals from Uncle Sam the offense mounts to proportions not adequately described by that term. And when one steals a moonshine still—

Warren Ruff, a young Klamath Indian, is charged with stealing a moonshine still from Uncle Sam who, in this instance, was personified by Henry Shadley, Chiloquin deputy sheriff, who says the still had been taken in a raid and was being held by him for safe keeping. Shadley had a suspicion as to the location of the missing still and, when the time was ripe, he descended upon Warren Ruff. In addition to Ruff, Jason Charley and Dan Weeks, Klamath Indians, were also arrested.

Will Face Two Charges

Ruff will face two charges, stealing from the government and operating a still. His hearing on the former charge is set for tomorrow morning before U. R. Commissioner Bert C. Thomas. The penalty in the former case is fixed by the government at not over $5,000 fine, or not over five years in the penitentiary, or both. The others will face charges of operating a still. All are federal cases.

Jason Charley, by the way, is the Indian whose curiosity cost him a broken head recently when he attempted to view a road show being staged at Chiloquin. Frank Adams, the owner, used a club on Charley, marks of which Charley still bears. Adams was fined $25 by Justice Snook.

The three Indians are held in the city jail to await hearings.

MISS HOGUE PASSES

Former Resident of Klamath Falls
Dies in San Francisco

The sad news of the death of Miss Nellie Hogue, a former and long-time resident of Klamath Falls, reached this city today. At the time of her death Miss Hogue was making her home with her father and mother in San Francisco, where she had resided for the past 12 years. Death resulted from a tumor from which Miss Hogue had suffered for a year or more.

Nellie Hogue had a host of friends in Klamath Falls, who will mourn her death. She was an exceptionally bright, witty, companionable girl; a graduate of Stanford University, endowed with more than ordinary natural ability and a most genial disposition. She made friends naturally and easily and never lost them. Sixteen years ago Miss Hogue was in the employ of the reclamation service in Klamath Falls in the capacity of stenographer. Later she was employed by Benson and Stone as a law stenographer, which position she resigned to accept that of secretary of The Jordan Estate corporation of San Francisco. At the outbreak of the war Miss Hogue rendered her services to the government, and was stationed at Berno, Switzerland, until the close of hostilities.

Miss Hogue leaves a father and mother, one brother and two sisters to mourn her untimely death.

ESSAYS ARE RECEIVED

School Students Take Deep Interest
In Prize Contest

Several essays have been received and others are in process of preparation, in the contest being conducted by the Catholic Civic Rights association.

A first prize of $20 is being offered to the grammar school student submitting the best essay on the subject—"Why the M's-named Compulsory Educational Bill should be Defeated." Second and third prizes of ten and five dollars are also offered.

Ordinary rules govern the judging, logical argument, spelling, grammar, punctuation and neatness being taken into consideration by the judges. The contest closes October 20.

The idea of the association, which opposes the bill, is to bring out expressions of feeling from the boys and girls, who would be directly affected by its provisions if it passed.

MA HAS A HARD TIME KEEPING HER "BACK DOOR" CLEAN

ALIENS WARNED TO HAVE GUN LICENSE PROVIDED BY LAW

State Permit Not Sufficient; Hunters Told to Tag Game Served
At Hotels or Restaurants

Persons who have not become citizens of the United States by taking out their final citizenship papers are warned by Marion Barnes, deputy game warden, against hunting or fishing without first obtaining a gun license in addition to the regular state hunting license. The gun license costs $25.

Several aliens through a misunderstanding ran afoul of the law recently when they went hunting without a gun license. In addition to the license fee, they were required to pay court costs.

Hunters are also warned against having game they have killed served in hotels without first attaching a tag to the game. The tag is supplied by the game commissioner and must remain attached until the game "shall have been consumed." The law is not interpreted as meaning that one must also consume the tag. The law also applies to game placed in cold storage plants or butcher shops.

Before the tag is issued, however, the owner of the game "shall execute an affidavit setting forth the fact that such game animal, game bird, game fish or part or parts thereof, was killed lawfully and now is legally in the possession of such guest or member, and that same and that no part or parts thereof have been purchased, or have been sold or offered for sale, barter or exchange. Upon presentation of such affidavit to any game warden or other person authorized to affix the metal tag or seal provided by this act . . . the game shall be tagged as provided herein."

"Just where the 'tags or seals' are obtainable no one seems to know. Barnes says none was sent to him. But that's the law, and tagged the game must be.

Through a typographical error yesterday it was stated that quail season opens October 13. The correct date is October 15.

16-PIECE BAND PROMISED FOR KLAMATH FAIR

Players Imported For Occasion; Fair Headquarters
In Hart Building

Will there be music for the fair and rago? The fair committee will tell the world there will be! Sixteen pieces, and a director, A. L. Kramer, imported from Seattle. Not only will be band play at the fair and rodeo, but it will play on Main street each day and lead the parade to the fair-ground. Five of the players will be imported.

Establish Headquarters

Fair and rodeo headquarters will be established Monday at Seventh and Main, in the corner store of the new Hart building. This will be the clearing house for the big show. Inquiries of every sort will be answered for visitors, exhibitors and others, and every effort will be made to facilitate the immense task of organizing the countless details of the three-day show. The headquarters will be in charge of John Keller.

Inquiries about the rodeo are pouring in from all parts of the west. The latest was from George Williams of Wetsler, Idaho, who asked whether an "A-1 lady trick rider could be used." The lady can be used, and Williams was so advised.

Horses coming in daily threaten to swamp the committee in charge of that feature. Additional facilities must be provided, according to Clyde Bradley. But no one cares how many horses come, just so they come in sufficient number to assure the success of the show. And from all reports the fair ground will resemble an old-time western round-up when the show opens next Wednesday.

Rooms Needed

Persons having rooms to rent are urged to list them at the headquarters promptly Monday morning. From all indications the city will be packed and jammed full of visitors, and it is essential that rooms be found for every one.

Want Ad Swamped Him Wanted His Money Back

The irate advertiser is not an unknown visitor in any newspaper office but the advertising manager of The Herald had a specimen of the genus to deal with yesterday that left the said A. M. gasping for breath.

"I want my money back," demanded the irate one. "That want ad simply swamped me with applicants. I rent the house a soon as the paper was out last night. I might have rented 25 more houses if I had had them handy for I had 26 callers by actual count. I ordered the ad run for three days. Gimme my money back on the two unused issues.

"Man," said the advertising man, "You're talking a dead language. That ad for three issues only cost you 45 cents and it is absolutely against our principles to give any money back. However, we figure you're nearly a month's rent ahead. If you hadn't used that little business puller your house would have stood empty until Lord knows when."

The visitor suddenly smiled broadly and the A. M. realized he'd had a laugh up his sleeve all the time and was only pretending to be vexed.

"Well, I was joking about the money back," he said. "I'm satisfied I never got a bigger bargain. But I'm serious about stopping the ad. I tell you I'm simply swamped with house hunters. Keep the money but for heaven's sake pull that porous plaster off my front door."

And if you think that the conversation quoted is a figment of imagination, don't swallow this story without investigation. Ask J. A. Goldsmith.
