

SAYS FLAPPERS ARE EASY TO REGULATE IF ONE KNOWS HOW

MISS JEAN HAMILTON

ANN HARBOR, Mich., Sept. 28.—As the new dean of women in the University of Michigan, Miss Jean Hamilton finds herself in the position of advisor, mentor, and first friend to hundreds of impressionable college girls.

It goes without saying that she has ideas about flappers. One of them is that "must" and "must not" are words that seldom should be utilized by a woman in her position.

"Young people resent the common criticisms of their elders because the elders often have so little sense of the relative importance of things," says she.

"Eyebrow pencils and lipstick are not moral issues. So why waste ammunition on little rabbits when you might need it later for big game? All too often when older persons lay down the law for the young women to follow blindly, their laws are based on personal likes and dislikes instead of real moral foundations. If I succeed in getting across to my girls an idea that is four square to the world, it is because the idea itself possesses authority rather than I."

Jean Hamilton is good to look at. Her hair is soft and brown. Her eyes are those of a woman who understands the complexities of others. And when her face is lighted by her smile, the beholder instinctively knows that Jean Hamilton is not one of those who have "so little sense of the relative importance of things."

Miss Hamilton was graduated from Vassar in 1909, receiving an M. A. from the same college a year later, after which she became executive secretary of the National League of Girls' Clubs, where she gained training and experience for her new position here.

Money and Markets

Business Conditions

The foremost question of the moment is whether the remarkable activity of the midsummer months will be followed by a period of gradually and conservatively increased business or whether it is forerunner of a period of secondary inflation. The indications point clearly to the conclusion that good business based primarily on domestic requirements is ahead for the autumn months but that inflation is the generally accepted sense will not occur.

Manufacture is on a satisfactory basis, excepting in so far as some industries have suffered from lack of coal and inadequate transportation facilities. Crop yields are excellent for practically all crops except cotton, according to the September estimates, and the forecast is for a cotton crop more than 2,000,000 bales above that of last year. Unemployment is practically non-existent. Retail and wholesale business in the United States during the autumn will show considerable expansion over that of the corresponding period of 1921.

It must nevertheless be recognized that even though crops are large, dollar wheat, a considerable decline in the price of hogs since the first of June, and relatively low prices of other agricultural products have reduced the purchasing power of the farmer. The situation is similar in respect to other important classes of raw materials. These conditions and the fact that not far from one million men were continuously out of work as a result of strikes during the greater part of the summer, are major factors which have effectively blocked inflation at this time. Business is being looked for requirements of the immediate future and forward buying is cautious. Good business is assured but it is not reasonable to expect a boom.

Conditions abroad and the state of the exchanges are not such as to encourage any idea that there is to be any large increase in European business in the near future. Exports from the United States to countries where general business shows improvement, such as Australia, the leading South American countries, Central America and increase somewhat but these countries are primarily dependent on conditions in the international market for raw materials, chiefly agricultural, and their inhabitants are therefore in a position differing in no important way from that of the American farmer. They will unquestionably buy more freely than they bought last year but not extravagantly.

It may well be that prices in some lines may continue to tend upward as price and wage readjustment proceeds but any rapid general upward tendency in the prices of goods ready for the ultimate consumer would be checked by unwillingness and inability on the part of purchasers throughout the world to follow up the market. Manufacturers and merchants will still find it essential to pursue a policy of careful and economical operation, for the best prospect of profits lies not in rapidly rising prices but in operating efficiency and gradually expanding volume of business.

Money Rates

The probable course of money rates during the next few months must be judged in connection with several factors, namely, the degree of activity in general business, the course of government refunding operations, the amount of slack present in the lending capacity of the individual banks of the country and the change in the effect of crop-moving requirements on the money situation by reason of the operations of the Federal reserve system.

One of the prime purposes of the establishment of the Federal reserve system was to overcome the seasonal stringency which prior to that time had been a characteristic of the money market of this country. The abnormal business conditions which prevailed from the autumn of 1914 until midsummer of 1921 made it impossible to judge with any accuracy the probable effectiveness of the system in stabilizing the money market through the crop-moving season. During the autumn months of 1921 the dominant factor in the money market was the rapid liquidation of loans as a result of the general business readjustment then in progress. The current season is the first since the passage of the Federal reserve act when the machinery then established has had the opportunity to function under reasonably normal conditions. It is nevertheless noteworthy that although large crops were moved very rapidly during the fall months of 1921, the resultant demand for money did not check the steady decline in money rates.

P. S. To Enter Politics Plans to Be Dark Horse

Dear Ed:

Well, Ed, as soon as the rodeo is history of the past and yrs. truly has brought home the pigs knuckles in every horse do combat, why I am going to demonstrate a new ideal for to make a wad of jack as well as to be one famous.

I got this ideal from my present experience with hoarases at the rodeo, which gives me the ideal to become a dark horse in the race for mare at the 4th coming city election. They's a white hoarse in the race, which is also present at every election, and the incumbent. Everybody is saying well they's going to be the dark hoarse as no election is not complete without one. An I always look innoesent like I did not know right along that I was that dark hoarse."

Well, my ideal is like this. I will go to the people which believe everybody is crooked but themselves, on acc. they belong to a different church or something, and who keep it quiet every time they take a drink, and say look hear if you want this towp cleaned up why this is your chance. If theres anything on earth I hate its booze and graft and if you will pungle up 500 (five hundred) bucks I'll get me elected and do your dirty wk.

Then Ill go to the leading and most respectable bootleggers and say now look hear, Booty old kid, if you want to continue to stay in business and pay a income tax per annum heres your chance. Five hundred iron men will be the army required to put the enemy to route by electing me mare. I get it, of course.

Next I go to the incumbent and say look hear, old top, I have got a full house but Ill bet you 500 (five hundred) that you will be elected. He sees I have got him going and coming and says sure and Ill pay the bet now, old, old man. That makes $1,500 (fifteen hundred).

Next I go to the poor old white hoarse and show him my hand and say look hear old swayback what chance have you got without I lay down and let you have the pot. And

TODAY'S FASHIONS

Two-Skirt Suits

It is now quite the thing to have two skirts to your suit. It is always the skirt that wears out and needs pressing first and many of the manufacturers have taken up the two-skirt idea. One may be fancy and the other plain and vary the wardrobe.

Paris—There is a tendency today to take over the fashionable accordion pleating for the purpose of the ornate negligee. One negligee as trimly cut as a frock and a member of the negligee family only because its comfort has a wide panel of accordion pleats down the front of its figured henna silk. Each edge of the panel is outlined with tiny pearls. These gems also outline the surplice waist, which crosses a little to the left of the front and ties in a broad sash in back.

London—Partly because of the chill, damp weather which has been so abundant this autumn, the crepe de chine shawl is in favor today for evening wear. It forms often a real part of the gown, not being removed from the shoulders at evening. These shawls are beautifully embroidered, sometimes in contrasting color and sometimes in self half tones. The bigger and brighter they are, the better both are, from the standpoint of grace and fashion.

New York—Ribbon is to play a brilliant part in the wardrobes of autumn and winter. A bit of ribbon in paisley pattern now may be used as the girle of a soft black gown, as an effective panel or with a tailored suit as a waistcoat. A fanciful sleeve is made of nothing more substantial than half a dozen streamers of ribbon fastened at wrist and shoulder. Shirrings of ribbons, rosettes and ribbon loops are seen in a profusion which runs the danger of making a gown look like a thing of shreds and patches.

What Could This House Tell?

This old house stands on the Phillips farm at New Brunswick, N. J., near the spot where the bodies of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Reinhardt Mills were found. Prosecutor Joseph B. Stricker (inset) is seeking witnesses to learn who inhabited the building which was generally thought to be abandoned.

PURITY ACCURACY

if I agree to give you the pot do I get back all the 500 (five hundred) bucks I have spent for expenses and et cetera. Well, you know the answer, Ed, because when this white hoarse sees he is this near to winning after many disappointments he is not going to let a few bucks stand between him and mare. Well, Ed, that makes $2,000 (two thousands) and that's all the jack I will need in addition to my salary as mare. Because just as soon as I tell the public as how all these birds tried to bribe me and how I scoorned them one and all, why they elect me, what I mean. When I get in I will make you assistant mare, Ed, so when the mare is away the horses will not play. Hows that for a darb, eh?
