Speaking of Salaries

A colored preacher in Alabama was one day talking to one of his aged parishioners, who ventured to express the opinion that ministers ought to be better paid.

"I see shore glad to hear you say dat," responded the parson warmly. "I see pleased dat you think we'd ought to get bigger salaries."

"Shore I does," said the old man. "And what makes you think dat way?"

"Den we'd get a better class of preachers."

The Polk Co. Fla. Record heads an editorial. Where Was Your Girl Last Night? This is rather a personal question, but we'll admit ours was, of course, with some other fellow.

"I lost a lot of money once." "How come?" "I proposed to a wealthy girl and she refused."

"What animal," said the teacher of the class in natural history, "makes the nearest approach to man?"

"The flea," timidly ventured the little boy with the curly hair.

The following item from the Wellington, Okla. News sounds like the good old times: "Lightning struck a Wellington buck agent on the cheek, glanced off and killed a mule two hundred yards away."

Jim Givans says the farmer isn't the only one who gets his living out of dirt. There is a modern novelist.

In Flytown

"Where is Buzzy Fly?" "On a paper." "And Jazzy Fly?" "On the screen."

A Washington statistical expert estimates that the average human being of seventy years of age has spent sixteen years of his life at work. This raises the old question of whether a plumber is a human being or not.

Wonder how many men would be satisfied if their dreams came true. Marvin Cross says the only way the meek will get the earth or anything else will be to inherit it.

Downstairs in the kitchen his mother was struggling with the supper fire.

"Tommy," said his mother, "fetch me a stick of wood."

"Ah, Mother," replied Tommy, "the grammatical portion of your education has been sadly neglected. You should say, 'Thomas, my son, transport from the recumbent collection of combustible material on the threshold of the edifice one of those curtailed excrecences of defunct log.'"

"Let the howlers howl, And the growlers growl, And the prowlers prowl, And the gee-gaws go it. Behind the night There's plenty of light, And things are all right, And—I know it."

TO THE PUBLIC

In reply to the news item in The Herald of Sept. 29th about my holding membership in the I. W. W. and the accompanying editorial, classing us with vicious criminals, we feel, though generally opposed to newspaper notoriety, compelled to answer.

The publication of the article in question has shown us at least how many staunch friends we have, and has induced a number of them to send away for I. W. W. literature. If the purpose of the article was to discredit us and deal a blow to the I. W. W., it has signally failed, as it has proved a decided boost in interest and, we are told, in membership.

Any one, who is in doubt, whether the editorial of The Herald was absolutely misleading and unjustified (not necessarily intentionally) should send for I. W. W. literature.

We challenge The Herald to quote from any piece of I. W. W. literature or from the speech of any authorized I. W. W. speaker anything that has even the slightest tendency to encourage criminal action.

If the I. W. W. taught what The Herald claims, we would indeed feel humiliated to have been found out as members.

As its real teachings are those of Brotherhood and Decency, coupled though with a determination to destroy by organization and education the evils of our present system, we feel not the least discomfited.

We trust that the readers of The Herald will judge us by our past life and general conduct, and if in doubt between our statements and those of the editor, inform themselves before passing judgment.

MRS. BEN BOND, YVONNE MOLLER.

Knowing in advance (having been consulted) about the publication of this letter, we shall be glad to furnish literature giving real information to anyone desirous of getting the real facts.

Something New in Earrings

First prize string beans created a furore at the horse show at St. James, Long Island. Miss Anna Hornaday wore them as earrings.

At the Theatres

THE LIBERTY

"I'm boss of this camp, and of everyone in it," says the tough and rugged lumberman, "except me," says pretty Katherine Trowbridge, who married him because, to spite her aunt and uncle, she had determined to marry the first man she met. "Including my wife," adds the man. Katherine realizes that this time she's not going to have her usual way. "Don't you fight him or does she succumb to his cavernous tactics?" says Viola Dunn in the Metro picture, "They Like 'em Rough," at the Liberty Theatre today and learn for yourself.

THE STRAND

Tonight the feature picture will be "Free Air" which is from the classic Lewis story in the Saturday Evening Post and is full of fights and thrills. It is of the western type and will interest all who attend. There is also good comedy.

Tuesday night the rate of 10c cents to everybody will be made. These ten cent nights are filling the Strand to capacity and the show is as good and complete at that price as is given anywhere at any price. The picture tomorrow night is "Honey Moon Ranch" which is a mixture of wild west and romance. It is worth seeing.

SAYS IT MADE A NEW PERSON OF HER

Thousands of people needlessly endure a half-sick, nervous run-down condition when they might enjoy sturdy, robust health and all its manifold blessings if they only knew what to do. People in this condition find Tangle soon ends their trouble and builds an abundance of strength, energy and vitality. Mrs. Bertha Davis, 417 N. Washington St., Spokane, Wash., says:

"My whole system was badly run down. I had no appetite, was very nervous, suffered from severe headaches and had rheumatism all over my body. The results I got from Tangle were surprising. Why, I haven't an ache or pain of any kind now, and I'm enjoying the very best of health."

Nervousness and a run down, tired-out feeling are but symptoms of a hidden cause, which usually lies in the stomach. Tangle enables you to digest your food properly, eliminates waste and helps you regain your old-time strength and vigor. Get a bottle today at any good druggist.
