She was from Boston, he from Oklahoma "You have traveled a great deal in the west have you not, Miss Bacon?"

"Oh, yes, indeed—in California and Arizona and even in New Mexico."

"And did you ever see the Cherokee Strip?"

There was a painful silence, but finally she looked over her glasses at him and said: "Sir, I don't question exceedingly rate."

All the education in the world can't prevent a man making a fool of himself if he is determined to do so.

Trouble With Wives An eastern editor says that a man out west got himself into trouble by marrying two wives.

A western editor replied by assuring his contemporary that a good many men in that section have done the same by marrying one.

A northern editor reports that quite a number of his acquaintances found trouble by merely promising to marry, without going any further.

A southern editor says that a friend of his was bothered enough by simply being found in company with another man's wife.

"James, correct that sentence," she said.

James went to the board and scrawled, "The toast was ate" in silence.

WHAT ABOUT DARWIN?

HERE'S MONKEY'S SIDE FOR FIRST TIME

BY THE NEW REPORTER

What does a monkey think about? Is he proud of being called the ancestor of the human race?

These questions I put to the leading monkey in Klamath Falls and the following is the first authentic interview on the subject:

"Day by day in every way I am growing gloomier and gloomier," he said, pressing his dolorous face against the bars of the zoo cage, and looking his tail around a convenient limb.

"I wish the human race pass by and then look me responsibly on Sundays and holidays like some thing any decent monkey would hesitate to claim kinship with."

"The thing that riles me is their conversation—their disagreement over Mr. Darwin's idea about men and monkeys having a common ancestor. Some look at me with pity, and others with scorn."

"I don't give a raccoon what they think! Maybe, Mr. Darwin was right if he was, I'm horribly ashamed."

"After looking over the human race, I'm glad to say I'm a monkey. You may quote me for that. If the people I see are a sample of what education does, I'm glad we never had a school board in my native jungle."

"I hear them chattering about apartments, and I contrast my happy lot with theirs. My airy, roomy cage has the average flat backed off the boards."

"They're always discussing clothes (especially the ladies). And when they're dressed up most of them look like monkeys—I mean, like scarecrows. I'm glad I don't have to wear socks and collars and athletic underwear and abominations like that."

MR. MONKEY

"What's this prohibition I hear so much about? Poor human beings, what a lot they have to contend with! They'd be better off caged—and let us monkeys see whether our branch of the family can't do something to make our common forefather proud of us. It's a sadly mixed up world. You'll have to excuse me now—I'm going to split a coconut with a friend."

Idaho Awarded Cup

MOSCOW, Idaho, Nov. 1.—The university of Idaho has been awarded the cup offered by the Harvard club of Spokane, Wash., for the best sportsmanship, cheering, songs and stunt presented at the annual football game between the University of Idaho and Washington state college.

This year marks the third successive time that the University of Idaho has been granted the cup, which will in consequence become its permanent possession.

In this year's contest, Idaho scored nine out of a possible perfect score of 12 points. The winner of the cup was decided by three judges, who had four votes each on sportsmanship, cheering, songs and stunt.

Idaho's stunt consisted of a living Idaho present formed on the field between halves by the students. The men formed the pennant and the women spelled out the word "Idaho" in the center. The Washington state college students formed a monogram of the letters W. S. C.

Football Game to Mark Home-Coming at Montana

MISSOULA, Mont., Nov. 1.—The University of Montana-Montana state college football game, a joint meet ing of the alumni of the university and the state college and the dedication of the men's gymnasium, are among the events that will feature annual Home-coming week at the University of Montana this year. The week's celebration will close Saturday, November 11, with the University-Angle football game.

The committee in charge of this year's festivities anticipates an unusually large crowd of visitors, and are making their plans accordingly. A special train will bring the state college students to Missoula on Armistice Day, when teams representing the two state institutions will clash on the football field.

All of the university's new buildings will be open for inspection during Home-coming, although some of them will be completed before December 1. The formal dedication of the men's gymnasium will also take place. A dedication dance will be held in the evening.

It is probable that a sophomore-freshman field day will be held in the morning of the day of the football game, to determine the supremacy of the two classes. An old-fashioned dinner for the alumni and former students of both colleges will be held in the evening after the game.

Save Repairs Paint Now

It Costs More to Rot a Building Than to Paint It

A GOOD way to determine how much it costs to rot a building is to find out how much lumber, needed to repair or rebuild, would cost.

You'll find that it costs several times as much as the paint which saves repairs. Paint your buildings when they need it. Rotting property is wasteful and extravagant.

The most economical paint, in the long run, is the best paint. It's easy to apply—saves labor cost. It covers more area per gallon than "cheap" paint.
