ACCOMPLISHMENTS SHOWN IN KLAMATH COUNTY CLUB WORK

Praise Is Given By State Leader; Record for 100 Per Cent Clubs Held Remarkable

Club work in Klamath county, as viewed from the office of the state club leader, is on a firm basis and bringing to the club members of the county very instructive work in the latest methods and practices of agriculture, home economics and animal husbandry, according to a report just issued by H. C. Seymour, state club leader. "The report continues: "During this year Klamath county has had 15 one hundred per cent clubs, which is a remarkable record, and which indicates that the club members starting their work are not dropping it but are taking it through its completion and exhibiting it either a community or county fair. It also means that the local leaders of these 15 clubs are putting into the work a lot of time and energy and have been unselfish in giving up their personal pleasures to assist these young people in carrying on their work. Frank Sexton, as county club agent, is putting into this work the very best of spirit and is separating from the club members and the local leaders the closest of cooperation.

Pig Project Outstanding
"One of the outstanding features of the work this year has been in the pig project, in which 48 pig club members carried on the work, all with purchased and registered pigs. All of these pig club members have filed their final reports, making the pig club project 100 per cent in the county.

"Another very valuable accomplishment has been the dairy herd record work carried on in the last two years. While this is not a profit producing project, one in which we can show in dollars and cents just what the members have earned, as we can in the pig club project, it has showed that they have learned much and have been of vast value to the people in the communities in showing up the real worth of the cows that have been under test.

"We predict for next year, as we are mighty proud of the excellent cooperation the people of the county are giving to the work."

Residents of Elma Washington Aid In Hunt Without Success; Beast Frightened By Baby's Cry

TACOMA, Nov. 4.—Armed officers and residents are engaged in a hunt at Elma today for the man who last night attacked Mrs. Russell Walker, 22, in her home there. No definite trace of the man has been found.

Mrs. Walker is confined to her bed from nervous shock and distress, but her condition is not considered serious. The man suddenly entered the woman's room as she lay upon her bed resting. She struggled with her assailant for some time, and he finally fled when a baby in another room began crying.

Mrs. Walker's description of the man was meagre, but she suspects he was the same man who entered her home two weeks ago and ran away when she met him prowling around in a room.

BOXING COMMISSION TURNS $30 SURPLUS TO CITY TREASURER

Money Will Go to Aid Fatherless Family of Seven; Further Help For Needy Seems Assured

Thirty dollars, the surplus after the statutory provisions governing finances have been complied with, have been turned over to the city treasurer by J. J. Furber, chairman of the Klamath Falls boxing commission. The money will go to relieve a fatherless family of seven. The father died about a year ago of pneumonia and the mother has been incapacitated, with the assistance of several local organizations, to support and keep the family together.

"If the boxing during the winter season is supported as well as the opening matches indicate," said Furber, "the commission will turn over to the city council several hundred dollars for charitable purposes."

State Statute Rigid

The statute regulating boxing in Oregon is rigid regarding the application of the money received, the theory being that the cleanliness of the sport is corrupted only when the revenues are loosely handled. So the law specifically directs how the money shall be distributed.

Outside the boxers, only one man draws any financial compensation. This is the promoter, who may get a flat fee of not more than $100 for each contest, or a percentage of the receipts if it is so arranged between the promoter and commission.

The boxing commission serve without pay.

Sinking Fund Created

After the expenses of the contests, including the boxers compensation and promoters fees, hall rent, publicity, etc., are paid, the law directs that the surplus shall go to create a sinking fund of $500 to meet contingencies that may arise.

After this $500 fund is created, any future surplus must be turned over to the city authorities to be expended in charitable work.

Is First Surplus

The $30 turned over this week is the first surplus that has ever accumulated here, and is an indication of systematic and businesslike administration by the boxing commission, and also that the sport is being handled in clean and aboveboard fashion by its promoters.

PIERCE'S TALK FAILS TO FIT PAST ACTIONS

Democratic Candidate for Governor Voted "Yes" On All Appropriations

SALEM, Ore., Nov. 4.—(Special)

—With the record of having voted for practically every appropriation bill, bond issue, mileage tax levy and salary increase measure brought to a vote in the state senate during the four regular and two special sessions of the legislature in which he sat as a member, Walter M. Pierce, who aspires to the gubernatorial chair of Oregon, will face the voters next Tuesday, November 7, with a general cloud of skepticism hanging heavy over the taxation issue with which he has tried so hard to supplant his early blunder in tying himself up to the Compulsory School bill, which now stands out as a defeated measure.

Would Pierce Reduce Taxes?

With the facts of Pierce's record before them the people of Oregon are going to inquire very pointedly: "Would Walter M. Pierce actually reduce taxes if he could as governor?"

They will then proceed to answer their own interrogation forcibly in the negative at the polling booths.

Pierce's record as a spendthrift of public moneys begins with his entry into the legislature as a state senator in 1903, so far as state taxes are concerned. During this session Senator Pierce voted "Yes" on every measure carrying an appropriation, or authorizing a bond issue or other disbursement of public funds that came to a vote in the senate. He voted for every one of the 29 money disbursement measures enacted into laws at that session of the legislature, totaling $2,657,711.32, and in addition voiced his voting approval of the two other measures of this nature which reached a vote but were defeated. During the session he voted for the full total of $2,663,711.32 in proposed expenditures.

Championed Salary Bill

He did not cast a single "Nay" vote on an appropriation bill. He was the active champion in the senate of the famous flat salary bill, increasing and fixing the salaries of governor, secretary of state, state treasurer, attorney general, supreme court justices and other state officers, which was defeated.

It was during the session of 1903 that Senator Pierce helped lay the foundation for what are now termed the "wild orgy of bond issues" the state is now experiencing. During the session Pierce voted for the only two bills presented authorizing bond issues, and both were to be refunded by direct taxation.

Voted for Appropriations

During the special session of 1903, Pierce voted "Yes" on the only three appropriation measures brought to a vote.

So far as Mr. Pierce was concerned the legislative session of 1905 was but a repetition of his record in the two previous assemblies. Twenty four measures providing for disbursements of tax funds were called to a vote in the senate with Pierce voting "Aye." The total of appropriations and bond issues was $1,462,576.95 to Pierce's credit. This now self-christened watchdog of the public purse was during that session absent and not voting on bills involving expenditures of $948,734.39 which included the second and third largest appropriation bills of the session. Four of the bills to which he gave his consent for passage provided for annual appropriations of $27,500.

Among the 35 measures introduced by Senator Pierce during this session of 1905 was one providing $25,000 for operation of the state portage railway, and another asking $70,000 for state normal schools.
