EDUCATORS HIT SCHOOL MEASURE

College Heads of National Repute Score So-Called Educational Bill

Active steps are being taken by opponents of the so-called compulsory education bill, which will be on the November ballot, to inform the voters of their reasons why this proposed law should not pass. Various Protestant denominations having vital interests at stake have established general headquarters on the fifth floor of the Consolidated Security building, Portland.

From this office is being disseminated literature and information concerning the bill. The organization is named Non-Compulsory and Protestant Schools Committee for Freedom of Education. W. L. Brewster, executive commissioner, and at present a member of the Portland Library board, is the chairman. Joseph A. Hill, principal of the Hill Military academy, Portland, an old established non-sectarian school for boys, is executive secretary.

That the proposed bill is raising widespread interest throughout the entire United States and that it is drawing attention from the country's foremost educators, some of whom, thus far, has been favorable to its provisions, is the declaration of Mr. Hill. Adverse criticism has been received from Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, who enclosed his letter by saying:

"This bill should be entitled 'A bill to make impossible the American system of education in Oregon.' It is fundamentally un-American in its principle and purpose and should be ever winningly defeated."

"The task of educating all the children of America is great enough to make right thinking men welcome the co-operation of every proper private and public effort to this end," comments Robert E. Vinson, president of the University of Texas.

Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago, says he believes the proposed law would "violate fundamental rights of American citizens with regard to the education of their children."

"It certainly looks like an attempt to give the majority of the people a dangerous power to restrict the diffusion of truth which it wishes to suppress," is the way Arthur Hadley, president of Yale university, sizes up the bill's provisions.

"These comments are by unprejudiced men of the highest standing, who have no interest other than the public interest," said M. Hill. "It is a good sidelight on the local situation from unbiased sources."

Private Schools Efficient.
Private schools, all of which are under state supervision anyway, are standardized, efficient, are NOT a menace; they teach American principles and ideals. Why close them, as the so-called compulsory education bill proposes to do?

Chas. Donart

Who Pays?

The county assessor's office estimates that the one-mill tax levy for Fair purposes, if carried, would raise about $20,000. Observe how this money is raised, according to their estimates:

Klamath Falls	$ 4,500
Public Utilities	1,300
Lumber Mills	2,000
Timber Owners	8,000
Total	$15,800

The balance, about $4,000.00 will be raised by other incorporated cities and the stockmen and farmers of the county.

The cost to the average farmer will be about half the premium on the second prize three-year-old Jersey bull.
