

THE STRAND

Who Clara Louise Burnham wrote her powerful story of "Heart's Haven" she drew her material from life as it is lived today in your home and in the homes of your friends and neighbors.

She made her story a romance of living actualities, with every-day men and women for her characters. The things that happen in the story are happening every day in New York, in Bangor and El Paso.

It's a story that plays on the human heart strings, a story that brings waves of emotion from people who have never shed a tear. It is a story of "Heart's Haven, and every heart that beats, if it hasn't a haven, is longing for one.

This great story is shown in pictures at the Strand tonight. Robert McKim, Craire Adams and Carl Gantvoort play the leading parts and it is a picture that you will enjoy.

There is a second, shorter feature, "The Young Patuter," and also a good comedy.

THE LIBERTY

We are responsible for the ideas of "Dream Street" to two stories "Gin of Chinatown" and "The Sign of the Lamp" by Thomas Burke.

"Dream Street" is a little story of a young girl in London. She makes her living in the music halls as a member of a minor dancing team, and, according to her old father's instructions, tries to live as decently as possible. As Burke says: "Gypsy was gentle, brave and gay, swift and restless as a bird, with a splash of southern blood in her veins." Perhaps the last part of the description made things rather difficult for her.

On the other hand are the two brothers; one a perfect specimen physically who chances to have a golden voice and a mighty fist. It is said he conquered the women with his voice and the males with his fist and so reigned undisputed king of the district.

And then there is a teacher of the streets, who believes that he hears a far, paternal God-like voice, and that it is his duty to give a message to the world. Also there is a street musician whose strange face is beautiful; but whose strangled viola, it is said, walls suggestions of evil as though from the will of a Lucifer, Prince of Darkness, himself.

Between these two forces struggle our characters in the play. Presented at the Liberty Tuesday.

PINE TREE

What is termed the "greatest picture that ever came to Klamath Falls" is "Manslaughter," which will be shown at the Pine Tree Tuesday and Wednesday. This is a ten-reel picture and is taken from the story in the Saturday Evening Post of the same name.

In San Francisco this picture has been playing for seven weeks and every performance played to a capacity house. For hours before the doors were opened the line before the ticket windows grew and when the last seat was sold there was still a line. This is known by the experience of some Klamath Falls people who were in San Francisco and saw the picture.

The production is Cecil B. DeMille's greatest and that means that it is, perhaps, the greatest picture ever made.

The story deals with a young lady of great wealth who cares little for the law, her experience having taught her that frequently the judicious use of money cleared her from trouble. Especially she is a speed demon with her high powered car and it was while trying to trick a speed cop whom she found to be honest and not open to bribery, that she caused his death.

Manslaughter was the charge against her and the district attorney to prosecute happened to be the man in love with the girl.

The prosecution and conviction and then the life in prison and the wreck which it made of the district attorney are all worked into the story, are the story itself, holding the audience in intense interest to the very last scene.

The Pine Tree will show the picture Tuesday and Wednesday for both matinee and evening performances and there will be no advance in prices. In order to get the complete picture in the allotted time the first evening show will start promptly at 7 o'clock.

CHECK ARTIST TAKEN

Patrick H. Bishop Alleged to Have Victimized Many Stores Here

Alleged to have left a trail of bad checks from one end of the city to the other, Patrick H. Bishop, 21, was arrested in San Francisco Saturday night. Sheriff Low was advised.

Until last Monday night Patrick had been employed at the Klamath Superior laundry. During the past week or two, the sheriff said, he has victimized a number of merchants upon whom he passed forged checks, many of which bore the name of Lamm Lumber company with the forged signature of Edith Lamm.

Some of the checks drawn on the account of Earl W. Biggs were given in payment for merchandise, in which transactions Bishop invariably obtained a large portion in change, it is said. He is believed to have passed between 15 and 20 checks, ranging in amounts from $20 to $50.

George Metz was one of the first to discover the irregularity of the checks, and he warned the sheriff and furnished an example of the man's handwriting. Bishop brought a watch for repair and wrote his name on the tag for identification.

Upon returning a few days later to get the repaired watch he offered a check on the Lamm Lumber company for payment, which was refused by Metz. Sheriff Low was advised of the fact and the hunt started, lasting for over a week.

Many times during that period the sheriff would advise the suspect at a forger by only a few minutes. When Bishop was suspected, and it was found he had gone to San Francisco, his former home, the police there quickly apprehended him upon the information furnished by Sheriff Low.

Tobacco takes its name from the island of Tobago in the Caribbean sea, where it was discovered. In the north of Ireland and Scotland the aprora borealis is visible on thirty nights of the year. The most ancient coins in existence are of electrum, which was an alloy of four parts of gold to one part of silver.
