High School Needs Are Set Forth In Student Newspaper

small; it was badly ventilated, had one small dressing room, and such things as showers were unheard-of luxuries.
They are planning on using the same hall again this year, and the girls expect to put out two basketball teams, as well as the boys. If the time can be divided so that both can get enough practice. In spite of the great handicap, they are determined to turn out teams that will adequately represent Klamath High.
The editorial columns indicate that the students are going to be heard from frequently on the question of improvements for the school, as is indicated in an editorial dealing with the purposes of the newspaper. Only a few of the members of the merchants' bureau, who recently visited the high school, knew of the existing conditions, such as the lack of equipment in the assembly, class rooms, and the "two-by-four" physical training quarters for the girls, the lack of proper ventilation throughout the building and the financial condition of the student body association, it is pointed out.
"All agreed that help should be given, but as to the way, they were uncertain. Some urged direct action by the county court; others direct action by the business men. But before anything could be done, publicity was needed. A school paper was favored, and a committee appointed to decide how the paper should be supported."

FARM NEED IS SEEN
Advertising of Products Is Held Essential to Success
WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The day when American farm products will be as extensively advertised throughout the country as the automobile and other manufactured articles will soon arrive, Dr. W. M. Jardine, president of the Kansas State Agricultural college, declared today before the Washington Ad club.
"The American farmer has been acquainted with only one side of the advertising business," he said. "In the main, he thinks of advertising as a more or less tricky device employed by middlemen to separate him from his money. He probably has somewhat the same opinion of advertising as a target has of rifle practice."
"The signs of the times, however, are pointing in another direction.

Bankers and members of chambers of commerce have begun to take the farmer in as a business partner. They are seeing that they must help him earn more money, and they are beginning to see that he needs help principally with his marketing and selling problems.
"The selling end of the farmer's business has been badly and most unfortunately neglected. Circumstances are to blame in part, he is to blame in part and business men are to blame in part. In a certain sense, advertising men are much to blame. Problems in marketing, advertising and selling that need solution much more than many which have been solved, have been neglected."
"Agricultural men of America have begun to concern themselves with the selling end of their business. They have begun to learn to sell co-operatively, to organize and to respect their organization. The next generation of farmers is going to grow up already 'sold' to the idea of organization."
