NEW STANDARDS

IF WE are to compete in the markets of the world with the nations of the world, we must have the best and cheapest of all kinds of transportation agencies and THE NATION'S WELFARE WILL ULTIMATELY BE THE YARDSTICK BY WHICH THIS QUESTION WILL BE MEASURED.

The man who spoke these words defined with exactitude the policy that must prevail in the future in dealing with transportation. Especially must the west adopt this policy, which means relinquishment of many of the old standards and old traditions, if the west is to maintain and increase its commercial and industrial expansion.

You might think that the opening paragraph is an utterance of some participant in the rail merger hearing at Washington. Certainly no more pertinent utterance could enter the record.

But it is not. It is a quotation from the address of J. N. Teal of Portland at the recent "open river" conference at Pendleton. The purpose of the conference was to secure state and federal aid for the fuller utilization of the Columbia for navigation, irrigation and hydro-electric development.

Teal argues that the waterways of the nation should not be discriminated against as carriers. All forms of transportation should, and must, be used to their fullest extent, he declares, and the warfare on waterways improvements, both open and concealed, must cease.

This is a shattering of the ancient icons, a smashing of the one-sided traditions that have prevailed and grown since rail transportation succeeded the steamboat a half century ago.

But the pendulum has swung its length in one direction. The people, who pay for the maintenance and operation of all transportation, sensing something top-heavy in our present distribution system, are calling for a thorough renovation of existent policies.

Whether this generation of transportation managers must go the way of all flesh before the goal can be attained is a question in Teal's mind.

We would say that the answer depended upon the transportation managers themselves. If they are men of broad vision they will see that there is big business brewing in the west—a potential volume of traffic that will tax their combined ability to handle.

If they are not big enough to realize—for instance in the face of ten thousand replies to the first advertisement of the Californians, Inc.—the big destiny that awaits the west; if they think they can hold back the swelling tide of development by the old Chinese walls around preferred territory, keeping it in cold storage until times are most propitious for its opening from the railway point of view; if they think they can bar the natural gateways with the rusty, outworn locks of another and different generation—they are figuring on a big job, and the penalty of failure on any job is elimination of the unit.

Anyway the handwriting is upon the wall for those who have the vision to see it, and the balances are ready for the weighing, with the people holding the scales.

ABOLISH SECRECY

THERE is much to be said for the suggestion that the membership of all secret or fraternal organizations be made a matter of public record. This policy is urged with special application to the Ku not be justly applied to that body without applying it equally to all others. It is evident that the Klan thrives on secrecy. That lends it a false glamor which attracts the curious. It is also evident that both the evil it does and the evil of which it is suspected are made possible mainly through secrecy. If a wrong is done in the Klan's name, nobody knows who does it. Thus justice is baffled. Secrecy of ritual is legitimate. But surely no honest society, genuinely representative of American citizenship, can properly insist on secrecy of membership.

Publicity of membership lists would offend none but the indefensible. Any organized purpose that must be masked is not American, no matter what devotions of secret censorship and invisible courts of justice may say. There has never been anything secret about the essential principles of Americanism, and no organization unable to face the light and accept responsibility for its acts can be American. Abolish this secrecy, then the Klan or any other order will stand or fall on its own merits.

RITCHIE WILL MEET SWINDLER

Former Champion Is Out To Regain His Lost Laurels

By "Ringside"
Earl Ritchie will have an opportunity to regain the heavyweight boxing championship of this neck of the woods December 22 when he will meet Joe Swindler, present champ, in a 10-round go at Scandinavian hall.

Ritchie lost to Swindler some weeks ago when Ritchie failed to come out for the fifth round, claiming an injured hand. Since nothing was settled in that match, Ritchie was anxious to try another go. With this for a background, the match should be a humdinger.

Twenty-eight rounds of boxing are scheduled in this card. Kid Evans will meet Sid Herbert, a boxer new to this city. They will go eight rounds.

Jack Harmon and Lawrence Daw will try to go six rounds without cracking coconuts. Judging from the way this match started out the other night, it should be a whirlwind. No matter which one wins, the other is certain to give a good account of himself.

Darrell Ritchie, Earl's young brother, and Douglas Perillard will stage the curtain-raiser.

With Earl Ritchie out to regain his lost laurels, and fully determined to do so, it would appear that there will be something doing at Scandinavian hall that night. Ritchie has been training for some time for this match, and if he loses it will not be because he is not in condition.

Lewis Espen, the game scrapper who lost to Swindler, left today for San Francisco where he will remain. As to the outcome of his match with Swindler, Espen had little to say except that he was honestly beaten and that Swindler is a clean boxer. He said he believed he would have done better had he not injured his right elbow early in the fight, since it pained him considerably and gave him a disadvantage. He did not see this for an alibi, however, nor did he claim he would have won had he not been injured.

Espen said he expected to get in to the ring game in San Francisco.

NEW POLITICAL PARTY IS HELD IMPROBABILITY

Need Less Partyism
Senator Norris adds that the chief evil lies in the fact that people must vote for candidates—especially presidential candidates—who are chosen by organization leaders. H. M. Haruch believes the difficulty lies in blind voting by people aligned with one party or the other for candidates nominated by that party.

In declaring he had no intention of leaving the democratic party in order to organize a new political party, as recently suggested, Haruch said he believed in the constructive liberalism of the democratic party. He said he thought those who have liberal and constructive ideas should get them incorporated into the old parties.

Progressive Control Predicted
Predicting that progressives will control the republican party within the next few years Senator Capper of Kansas says: "I do not look for any third party. However, the progressive spirit justifies hope that the new spirit of the people can direct action through the present parties."

Says Samuel Gompers, president of the American federation of labor: "If both parties commit themselves to reaction, they both are doomed. But from the standpoint of today I do not see the need for a third party."

SHOOTS FREAK DUCK
White-Bodied Green-Winged Teal Brought Down by Hunter
PORTLAND, Dec. 5.—Theories maintained by naturalists that freak birds do not reproduce their kind are disputed by a story brought to the state game commission by R. M. Smith of Portland, to the effect that a flock of white-bodied green-winged teal ducks have their home on Summer lake, in Lake county. To substantiate his story Smith brought one of the ducks to the offices of the game commission. This duck was shot early in the week by Smith. The body was sent to the biological survey for presentation. Smith said the freak duck was one of a flock of 40 which he saw on the lake. Oregon produced 1,000,000 bushels more potatoes this year than last.
