

The Office Cat

BY JUNIUS

Hot Lips is a Jazz Song Timid man entering music store—
Have you got Hot Lips?
Pretty salesgirl—How dare you insult me?

Just Like That Jane—"How did you act when you saw Jack this morning?" June—"I gave him the geological survey."
Jane—"In other words?"
June—"The stony stare."

W. C. Ezell says we can't all have the vacations we'd like nor the vacations we'd like, but we can all have those that we have.

"Could you fix me up a dose of castor oil so it won't taste?" asked the girl of the druggist.

"Certainly, Madam. Won't you have a glass of soda while you are waiting?"

"Oh, thank you," the girl replied, after drinking the soda.

"Is there anything else?" asked the druggist.

"No, just the oil."

"But you have just drank that."

"Oh, dear! It was for mother!"

Apropos of the light thrown upon the character of the ex-kaiser by the publication of his memoirs, this story is going the rounds of European diplomatic circles. Shortly before the beginning of the world war, Emperor Bill took his usual early morning walk alone toward a lake on one of his imperial grounds. He returned in a towering rage with his clothing soaking wet and covered with mud.

"He never did it! He never did it! He never did it!" he kept exclaiming.

"Was it he, sir, that he never did?" ventured his favorite valet.
Looking down at his wet and bed-ragged uniform, he roared: "He never walked on the water."

J. W. O'Brien says a pessimist is one who classifies the world war as a round one.

Just The Thing

Assistant Editor—This new story of Chamberlain's is horribly mushy.
Editor—We'll run it as a cereal.

Tom Watters says the way to get rid of a pest is to tell him to call you up on the phone. He will never be able to do it.

Restaurant Patron (whispering): —Waiter, can you serve us something with a kick in it?
Waiter (whispering)—Wait till you get the bill.

Ed Sutton says interest never goes on a vacation.

"No man," says Roy W. Nelson, "has lost his beautiful faith in human nature, so long as he can look in the mirror, when his face is covered with shaving lather and his top hair sticking up in tufts, and still believe that some woman loves him for himself alone."

Putting a Kick in Home Brew

Scientists at the Sorbonne University, Paris, have discovered that alcoholic beverages, if given 50,000 to 120,000 volts of electricity are placed in the same condition as if they had been stored away from 20 to 50 years. Here is Professor Charles Henry putting a kick in a barrel of wine by subjecting it to a charge of 90,000 volts.

LIQUOR FLOODS LONDON MARKET

No Ready Sale Found for Shipments From France And Spain

LONDON, Dec. 7.—London markets have been flooded recently by large shipments of champagnes and wines from France and Spain, which however, find no ready sale here.
The wine shops of England are already overstocked with pre-war vintages which the merchants are unable to dispose of. Most of these stocks were purchased during the war, or just after, and at high prices, with the result that the dealers are unwilling to lose their profit in order to get rid of the stocks.

Light wines, which includes clarifies, sauternes and barsacs, are selling for an average of four shillings six pence (about one dollar) a quart, as compared with two and three shillings before the war, and the heavier wines are bringing more than double their former prices. Champagnes cost about one pound sterling a quart at the present time, but vary widely according to the vintage.

The new stocks being offered by the wine growing nations may be purchased at prices which are even lower than those which prevailed before the war.

Consumption of wine in the British Isles, to increase the difficulties of the dealers, has dropped to almost half of what it was in 1913. Hotels and restaurants complain of the slump, and wine lists nowadays contain only the most popular brands, and these are called for only sparingly.

The troubles of the wine brokers, however, do not extend to the whiskey manufacturers. Despite the loss of a considerable export trade to the United States, the distilleries have increased their output and a ready market awaits the product. In many of the more popular brands the retail dealers are unable to keep a supply on hand, and the mail order business of the distiller has doubled within the last two years.

The price of whiskey is higher than ever before, twelve shillings ($2.50) a quart being asked for the best grades.
