BY JUNIOR

It is indeed distressing when you keep a person guessing. As to what a toast is toasting anyway. My toast is just a blessing. On your turkey and your dressing. And the other things that make Thanksgiving Day.

The Cynic

Lambey—Marriage reminds me of a restaurant at a busy hour. Osper—Why's that? Lambey—Well, one simply grabs something that looks nice and pays for it later on.

E. L. Hosley says he is the benefactor of mankind who makes two grins grow where there was only a frown before.

Unusual conditions give unusual men their opportunities, curtly remarks C. J. McCollum.

Jeff Riddle says a stacciano claims what 50 per cent of the people who go into banks go in to fill their fountain pens.

T. F. Doggs says it's a wise man who can wear his honors as comfortable as he can wear an old shoe.

Economy with many persons means to save on things they need to spend on things they want, opines O. D. Burke.

Phyllis: "I told dad that Robert was the mark of all my affection. Clarice: "And what did dad do then?" Phyllis: "He toed the mark."

W. C. Dalton says when this country needs more than a good 5-cent cigar is a good plate of ham and eggs for 35 cents.

Oil Field Problem Decision Awaited

BUCHAREST, Nov. 9.—The question of the nationalization of the sub-oil soil in Rumania, which is in effect the problem of whether the unexploited mine-bearing formations shall be declared the property of the state, will shortly be taken before the national assembly as a result of the investigation of the commission for reform of the constitution.

The final decision of the assembly is awaited with interest, as it will effect the rights of the various oil interests to exploit the vast Rumanian oil fields.

The idea of nationalizing the sub-soil was advanced by M. Vintila Bratiano, minister of the finance, and has met with much opposition from all parties. The nature of the report to be made by the commission is not known, but opponents of the measure threaten to defeat the government should it be favorable to M. Bratiano's policy.

AT THE THEATRES

THE LIBERTY

"The Men Who Waited," a Playgoers feature depicting a drama of stolen gold and stolen hearts in the Golden West, comes to the Liberty theatre tonight, with Frank Draidwood in the title role.

The man of the title waited years to find the villains who ruined his father, but before he has his vengeance he falls in love with the daughter of one of them and is himself nearly a victim of their treachery.

Face to face with a man-eating grizzly; grappling with the snarling brute till the man tattered on the very brink of eternity; hurled into a surging, ice-jammed river in a blinding snow storm to rescue a girl who was caught in the swift currents; both being borne on the tide over jagged rocks to the very edge of a great water falls—these are but a few of the thrills that combine to make Jane Novak's melodrama "The Snowshoe Trail," which will be at the Liberty theatre tomorrow, one of the outstanding dramatic thrill subjects of the season.

The screen has produced many a super-thrill in the course of its career but seldom, if ever, has a single production possessed such a stirring succession of gripping scenes as "The Snowshoe Trail." Miss Novak and Roy Stewart, her leading man, risked their lives not once but a dozen times in filming this subject in the snow-covered reaches of the Northwest.

The scene in which they are spilled off the backs of their horses into the raging waters of the ice-jam in the midst of a blinding river is almost in a class by itself in point of sheer thrill.

PINE TREE

Hilda O'Shaunnessy works in the toy department of the Bon Ton store—and also plays the part of an animated doll in a big Christmas display. Her ambition is to earn money enough for proper treatment for her crippled little brother Mickey, who spends most of his time on the roof of their tenement. Directly across in a "roof bungalow" lives Emery Gray, a grouchy young artist, a widower, and his little girl, Susan. Roof top life is enlivened by the feud between Hilda's Irish aunt and Emery—and the latter's growing interest in the little toy saleswoman.

In the midst of the Christmas rush Hilda sees snow on the shoulder of a customer—and remembers that Mickey is alone on the roof. The floor-walker tries to stop her but she brushes by and out of the store. The boss is told—but instead of "cajoling" her, he takes her home in his limousine.

The unhealthy interest of the boss suggests to Hilda a means to get money to pay for a sanitarium for Mickey. The next day the boss asks her what she wants for Christmas—and she answers, "A long squirrel coat."

coat. She promises to meet him the next night "right in front of the house"—and hands the coat for $500.

That night, Christmas Eve, she dances for Mickey in her doll costume—and the next day sees him off for the hospital.

Then she goes to the roof, prepared to leap to her death, to meet Gregory Sterna "right in front of the house" as she had promised.

But Emery saves her just in the nick of time. Sterna, impatient, comes to the roof—and Emery recognizes him as the man who had wrecked his home and stolen his wife. A fight follows—and little Susan gains a new mother.

The story is one of unusual appeal and will prove a delight to the average child. There are many thrilling scenes all of which will hold the attention of spectators to the final fade out. The finish is novel, dramatic and quite captivating.
