

WILD WEST STILL EXISTS IN MIND OF THIS FLORIDA MAN

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 15.—That the "Wild West" of story book fame still exists in the minds of American citizens who have never been west of the Rocky mountains has been further demonstrated by receipt here of a letter from Edwin Terry of Miami, Fla.

Terry's letter, addressed to the Mayor of Spokane Falls, Washington Territory, reads:

"I am writing you concerning my brother. Do you know anything about him or his family? It is nearly 20 years since I heard he had a horse ranch out there somewhere and there is a small legacy in his favor and I would like to find him or his family. His name is C. D. Terry or Christopher Duncan Terry. Information will be gratefully and thankfully received. (Signed) Edwin Terry, Miami, Fla."

After stating that he intended to tell Mr. Terry of Florida that the Indians were too active this winter to permit of searching the plains of eastern Washington for the lost relative, Arthur Meehan, secretary to Mayor Charles A. Fleming, said seriously that he would like to learn of C. D. Terry's whereabouts.
