

SOCIETY

The week before Christmas has little to offer socially. A few brave souls find time in the rush of Christmas preparations to entertain, but the majority are far too busy. The week following December 25 is expected to be full of social events—dances, dinners and card parties.

One of the events of the week was the big Christmas party and tree given by the Masonic and Eastern Star lodges to the children of members. A tree loaded down with candy and presents and guard by Santa Claus greeted the children upon their arrival at the Masonic hall at 8 o'clock last night. A program of music and dancing followed the giving of the presents and altogether a delightful time was enjoyed by the large group of children and grown-ups in attendance.

The Fairview school prepared and rendered a program in observance of Christmas. The program was given on Friday afternoon before an audience made up of the school children and their parents and friends. The program follows "Welcome" by Addie Stiles; songs, "Merry Christmas" and "Round the Christmas Tree"; by first and second grades; play, "A Plantation Christmas"; by seventh and eighth grades; song, "Jingle Bells," by school. Visit From St. Nicholas, Nellie Rose; "Upon the Home" by school; "Dolly's Christmas Party" by school; recitation, Eva Eisenhart; "Christmas Candles" first grade; "Christmas Carol" school; recitation, Frances Gysbers; "A Christmas Dream," second grade; "Why Do Bells at Christmas Ring?" Elizabeth instrumental solo by Mrs. Nelson; "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear" and "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing" whole school; closing at time "Mamma" fifth and sixth grade.

"There Was No Room in the Inn" was the play chosen by the students of the Special Board Academy, which they gave Friday afternoon for the entertainment of their parents. The afternoon was a decided success. The play was well attended by the parents and friends of those taking part in the play.

The Matron's club of the Eastern Star Lodge will meet Friday of next week for a social afternoon at the Baldwin hotel. Hostesses for the afternoon will be Mrs. H. E. Moninger and Mrs. Wilbur A. Jones.

Wednesday, a week ago, twelve friends of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Mathews were honored at a surprise party the occasion being Mathews' birthday. The initiators of the party arrived at the Mathews home

The Skirt Length Isn't Settled Yet

COPYRIGHT BY Mc CALL'S

Just as everyone has practically accepted long skirts for winter there comes just the echo of a whisper that perhaps skirts are not going to be quite so long after all. Now afternoon dresses are seven to nine inches from the floor, sports clothes are nine and ten and evening gowns are three to six.

Blacksheep!

COPYRIGHT BY Mc CALL'S

They may try to hide the family blacksheep by calling it krimmer, caracul, broadtail, Persian lamb or astrakhan, they may dye it white, gray or sand color, but it's the same little lamb, anyway. Fashionable winter capes are black lined with black or gray caracul. Long coats of black and short coats of light krimmer, caracul or lamb are conspicuous everywhere fashionable women meet.

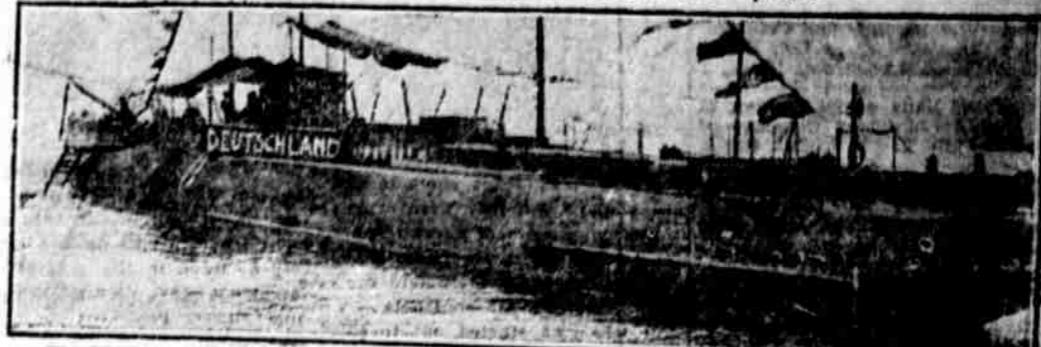

PARIS—A coquettish little shoulder cape most delightfully misnamed the "Pilgrim," is seen on many velvet afternoon frocks today. It barely reaches the waist line but often it takes the place of sleeves, and its vivid crepe de chine lining adds a distinctive touch.

LONDON—To see a smartly gowned Parisienne tripping across the Place Du La Concord in the season's high shoes these days is to witness a triumph of style over weather. The shoes are high, to be sure, but they are mere ribbons of suede or of bronze with sheer hoseley gleaming through.

LONDON—A snaky little fur bordered panel is the proper thing today on one side of the winter suit coat. Collar and cuffs are presumably of fur, and this panel, made of twisted folds, has a fairly wide edge of the same fur. Tapering, as it reaches the hem, this length of fur has a serpentine look as the panel twists with the wearer's motions.

NEW YORK—One jewel is not enough nowadays in a long silver chain. Two or more must be combined with pearls or jet or crystal to harmonize with the variegated tints of the costume, especially if the costume be brocade. A thin platinum chain is set, for example, with coral, lapislazuli with amethysts with here and there a little pearl.
