ANCIENT ROMANS USED MODERN HEATING METHODS

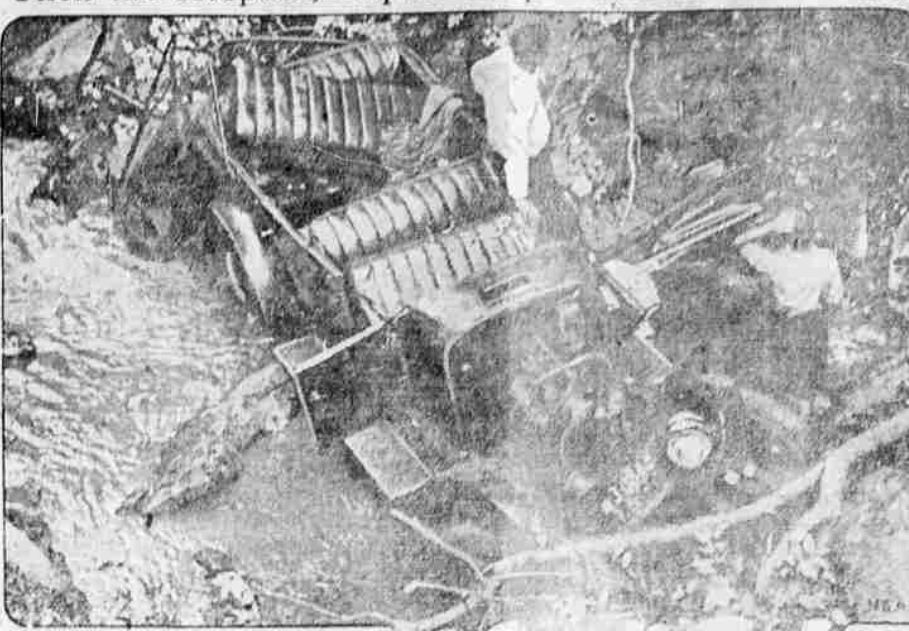

LONDON, Aug. 5.—A central heating apparatus used in a Roman villa about seventeen centuries ago has been unearthed in the course of excavations at Kenyngton cemetery, Somersetshire.

The villa, which was about 120 feet long, was heated by a hypocaust or heating chamber, the heat passing under the floors of various rooms by means of a series of passages. Some rooms were reached by means of flues instead of the floor passages.

This machine, carrying three women and a man, plunged into a pond embankment at the Virginia end of the Chain bridge near Washington, D. C. One of the women was seriously injured. The man was cut about the head. His wife sued for divorce the next day.

HEARTLESS LAWS MAKE MARRIAGE NO EASY MATTER

MOSCOW, Aug. 5.—When the American congress passed the law annulling the previous rule that a foreign woman automatically became an American citizen by marrying an American, it put Herculean difficulties in the path of Dan Cupid in the document cursed countries of eastern Europe most frequented by a certain fine type of young American men at an age when they are very susceptible to pretty foreign girls and matrimony.

The American relief administration, the near east relief, the Y. M. C. A. and other organizations which since the war have conducted relief operations in Poland, Austria, Greece, Russia, the Balkans and the Baltic states, sent hundreds of young Americans, mostly former army officers, into cities noted for their charming girls.

Before the law became effective last September, marriages of Americans to these girls was relatively easy, although even then it involved digging into records for documents, more documents and still more documents. Once this was accomplished, however, all the young Americans had to do was to go to the nearest American consulate, have his wife's photograph pasted on his passport, and, if he was ready, could take her home an automatic American citizen and show her proudly to his folks.

But today things are different. A few weeks ago one young member of the near east relief mission in Armenia got a brief vacation and came through Moscow on his way to Warsaw to marry there a lovely Polish girl who had waited for him two years. They had met when he was with the American Red Cross and she a nurse on the Polish battlefields against the Russians.

"I'll be back in ten days; save a room for us at the hotel," the American said blithely and confidently as he left Moscow.

Six weeks later he returned, with his bride, having miraculously untangled miles of red tape and over-

PEST THREATENS 'FRUIT CROPS IN SPOKANE DISTRICT

SPOKANE, Aug. 5.—Unless the fruit growers in the Opportunity district, east of Spokane, are willing to wage an intensive warfare on the leaf roller this year, at least 50 per cent of them may as well quit trying to grow apples on a commercial basis, L. M. Pinkerton of the county horticultural bureau, has told growers here.

"The rancher in the valley does not realize that his negligence in spraying for this terrible pest is robbing him of his home and livelihood," Pinkerton is quoted as saying.

DISCUSS LAWS FOR AIRCRAFT SAFETY

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 5.—Needed legislation for the protection of aircraft operation will be one of the principal topics of discussion at the annual meeting of the national air institute, which will be held here October 1-3, under the supervision of the aeronautical chamber of commerce. This body is cooperating with a committee representing the

REWARD FOR EVERY CHINESE PNEUMATIC MATCHED OFFERED

SPOKANE, Aug. 5.—The Spokane Police department has offered a reward of $100 for the capture of any Chinese man or woman who is found to be a matchmaker for Chinese men and women who are seeking to marry in the city. The reward is offered for every matchmaker who is found to be a matchmaker for Chinese men and women who are seeking to marry in the city.

Protecting the community from the Chinese matchmaker is a task which is necessary to protect the community from the Chinese matchmaker. The matchmaker is a person who is found to be a matchmaker for Chinese men and women who are seeking to marry in the city.

"The farmer in cutting his alfalfa will in all probability uncover many nests of Chinese matchmakers," said McGee. "The old birds often leave the nests and don't return and if the farmer will place the eggs under a hen and hatch out and care for the young pheasants he will be paid $1 each for his trouble."

"When the young birds are 7 weeks old they will be able to care for themselves. If not closely watched they will leave the hen about that time. Prior to that time they should be allowed their liberty, the hen being confined instead. The young birds are very susceptible to disease and should not be let out when the grass is dewy. If the brood is to be let loose, it is well to settle the birds by placing them near a stand of brush or high grain stubble, where they will be able to find protection."

McGee hopes to establish "war zones" where all farmers are pledged to a definite program which will eradicate the pest from those zones.
