

YANKEE DOUGHBOY WRITES HOPEFULLY TO YOUNG PRINCESS

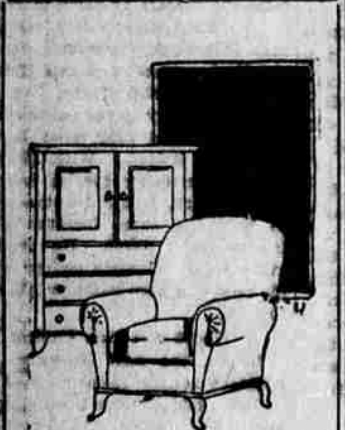

BUCHAREST, Aug. 21.—Queen Marie tells a delightful story about her youngest daughter, Princess Ilyeana, in which an American doughboy living in Pennsylvania figures. The former Yankee soldier, who had served on the western front in France, returned to his father's farm in a little town near Philadelphia, where he saw photographs of the little princess with her pet dog in the American Sunday pictorial supplements. Enamoured of her smile and girlish beauty, the doughboy wrote the princess asking her to correspond with him, and saying if she would become his girl he would "never take any other girl to the movies."

The princess, who is just past 14 and surpassingly pretty, replied to the Yankee soldier boy, enclosing her photograph and saying she had heard a lot about the gallantry of the American soldiers and would be delighted to hear from him again. The doughboy replied expressing his renewed admiration for Europe's prettiest princess, and a wish to see her in real life. Ilyeana was about to acknowledge his letter when her mother, Queen Marie, discovered the correspondence and cautioned her that she must not raise false hopes in the heart of her youthful admirer. She ceased her letters regretfully, but the letters from the doughboy have continued to this day.

BRITISH EXPERT SUGGESTS LIMIT ON AIR ARMAMENTS

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Major-General Sir Frederick Maurice, who was chief of military operations for Great Britain during the war, declares in an article on the increase in the air forces of France and Britain that "it is high time the question of limitation of armaments is taken up seriously." He says that the British government's recent decision to nearly double England's present air equipment meant a return to competition in armaments and that such competition is not likely to lead to improved relations between the two countries.

General Maurice emphasizes Great Britain's willingness to enter into a conference on the reduction of air armaments similar to the Washington conference on naval armaments. But for the present, he says, Britain must, out of self-protection, bring her air strength up to that of France. "France," says he, "is the only country which within the next ten years is likely to be able to consider seriously an attack upon England from the air. Today we are not in the most remote danger of invasion which comes by sea. Therefore, for the first time for centuries, the navy has ceased to be our first line of home defence, and that role has devolved into the air force."

able to combat their natural enemies. Touching on the tourist, Dorris predicted that within five years the income derived by Klamath county from that source would be equal to the income from lumber and agriculture.

Described Pioneer Days Adams, a Klamath county pioneer, told of the days when game was so plentiful that it was not considered the day would ever come when it would be scarce. Antelope could be seen within sight of the spot where the banquet was being held, he told his listeners, and grizzlies were plentiful until a $50 bounty caused their rapid depletion. Tule lake, which is now nearly dried up, was a trout paradise. Trout caught there ranged in weight from 12 to 18 pounds, and in addition there was another large fish whose identity was never established.

Touching on the agricultural resources of Klamath county, Adams told how his vegetable and general farm products won first prize over other western states at the irrigation congress exhibit at Sacramento years ago, Utah taking second and Colorado third. He declared that the agricultural development in the county is not one tenth of what it should be, raised to its rightful standard.

Osterbein entertained the gathering with reminiscences of fishing expeditions in the county. With intelligent propagation of trout, he concluded, Klamath county will be able to furnish all the rainbow trout eggs Oregon can use, and ten times more tourists can come to Klamath county without depleting the game resources.

CHURCH STILL PAYS DEBT IMPOSED 400 YEARS AGO BY KING

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The record for a long distance fine appears to belong to the office of vicar of the Church of Our Lady of Willesden, which ancient edifice stands in one of London's suburbs, for that parsonage is required to pay an annual contribution of one pound, two shillings and a sixpence to the king, and he has been paying it for almost 400 years.

This fine was imposed after the reformation by Henry VIII on the medieval vicar because he allowed pilgrims to come to his church and bathe their eyes in the water of a well which is supposed to contain curative properties. The pilgrims in gratitude often left sums of money, which aroused Henry's ire, and the vicar escaped the stake only by handing all the money thus collected over to Henry, and agreeing to pay an annual fine, and vesting his sins on his successors.

Although Henry instituted many such gentle methods of increasing the kingly exchequer, this is the only instance of the fine still being paid. The well on the church property still attracts many pilgrims who come to bathe their eyes with the miraculous waters, many of whom claim to have been cured thereby.

CHINESE RIGHT TO CHASTISE SONS IS UPHELD IN COURT

LONDON, Aug. 21.—A Chinese father's right to chastise disobedient and unjust sons is illustrated by a case in the civil court of Wei-hai-wei, and mentioned in the annual report of that colony.

Two sons had attempted to deprive their aged parent of property reserved for his personal use after the remainder of his belongings had been divided. Asked in court why he had not punished the offenders for their greed, the father replied that he was not strong enough.

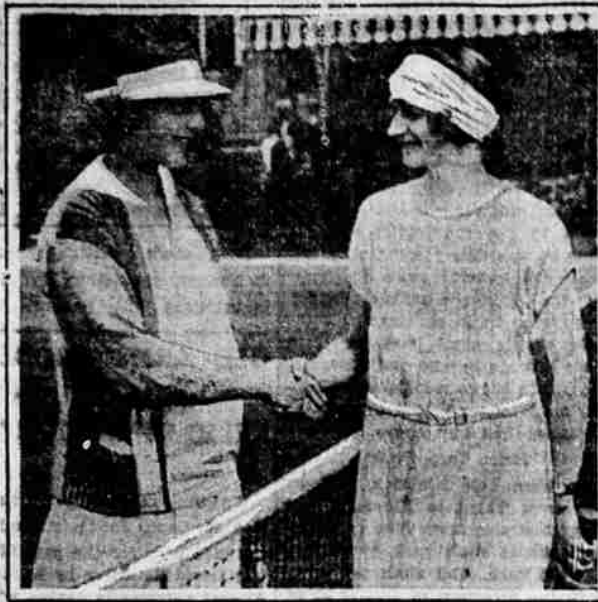

But as the unfilial sons, who are both over forty years of age, now appeared submissive before the magistrate, the parent gladly seized the opportunity to administer the overdue correction with a strap supplied to him in court. The sons took the medicine for their moral health without a murmur, while the old man was delighted.

Main Entrance

In a small western city there were three stores side by side. They were all selling the same general lines of goods. Two of them were persistent and liberal users of advertising space. The proprietor of the store in the middle of the row never spent a dime for publicity.

His competitors put on a big sale and advertised it extensively. On the opening morning of the big event the non-advertiser put a sign above his door, "Main entrance."

A man may get along for years by taking advantage of the combined advertising of his competitors but he exhibits his principles by so doing.

The merchant who has self respect and believes in building up his community, instead of taking advantage of it to get all he can and give little in return is always using a certain percentage of his profits to advertise not alone himself and his goods but the resources of his home town.

Herald advertising columns are an index of the live merchants who believe in building up Klamath Falls and making it a good business place for all.
