BARBERS APPLY SHOP METHODS

Millmen Have Shave, Hair-cut and Whole Works Before They Wake Up

The barbers fulfilled their promise and gave the Lamm Lumber company baseball team a close trim at Lamm's mill Sunday, but it was a close shave for the barbers, too. The game ended 18 to 14 for the barbers. The score, however, does not tell half the tale—how the razor wielders ran up 17 tallies in the first four innings, batting one pitcher from the box before the lumbermen awoke to their peril.

"It was like going in a barber shop and calling for a shave," said one of the Lamm players. "You go to sleep and the first thing you know you have had a shave, hair-cut, shampoo, face massage, manicure, hair tonic and all the rest of it. The barbers simply applied their well known business methods to baseball. What could an ordinary sawmill guy do, I'd like to know?"

However, to show there is no hard feeling, the millmen and barbers will try it again on the Modoc field a week from next Sunday.

DECLARE MOTHERS RESPONSIBLE FOR NAUGHTY CHILDREN

PORTSMOUTH, England, Aug. 27.—Children supposed to be suffering from nervous disorders are often merely naughty. This is the verdict of some of England's greatest doctors. In their discussion of one thing and another in the field of human weaknesses at their recent conference here, the physicians devoted quite a lot of time to bad little boys and girls. They agreed that most children revel in pranks for the sheer fun of exasperating their parents. Sometimes they cut up and make a perfect nuisance of themselves just to attract attention.

The doctors did not blame the younger generation for its misconduct. They seemed to think mothers are mostly to blame if their offspring are naughty. To their mind, if mother shows she is distressed and aggravated when little junior eats dirt, or walks in mud with his new Sunday shoes, or satisfies some other praiseworthy whim, she can count on it that junior is going to accept the first opportunity to do it again. The doctors did not say it would be a good thing for parents to snub their children once in a while, but they left the impression that this might be beneficial. Children who are always refusing food are not necessarily suffering from some nervous complaint, the doctors said. Often they are merely obstinate because of excessive urging from parents or nurses. Contrariwise, the children of the slums whose parents have difficulty in keeping the larder laden, often reveal the opposite fault. They demand what they cannot get, and the response to their clamor for more helpings is that food is doled out grudgingly, accompanied by many complaints on the enormity of the child's appetite. Students of racial traits were interested in the report of Doctor Pabba, whose work is conducted in London's poor East End. He said 80 per cent of the children he had to deal with were Jews, and he found among them very little nervousness, but among the 20 per cent of Gentiles, there was almost universal nervousness.

They Have Quit Advertising

Barnum & Bailey never advertise any more—they are dead ones. Dead ones never advertise.

But the business which Barnum & Bailey founded was built almost wholly on advertising. So liberal with advertising space were those men that they called into being the phrase, "advertise it like a circus."

And that is what a man must do to succeed in this age of intense competition. You have to do it or the other fellow will have his business and yours, too.

Even the men who write pretty stories for the entertainment of the modern flapper realize the intensity of the age in which we live. One of them wrote, "The race of life grows intense; the runners crowd upon each other's heels. Woe be unto him who stops to tie his shoe lace."

Are you fiddling with shoe laces while your competitor uses his best mental ability to attract trade to his store, by well worded, yet truthful advertisements? Better look after this matter. And if in doubt a Herald ad man will be glad to help you.
