JUST TO KEEP THE RECORD STRAIGHT

EVER SINCE the Herald began its argument against the K. K. K. more than a year ago, the editor has received reports that a story is being consistently circulated that he is a Catholic. The malicious manufacturers and disseminators of the rumor further assert that the Herald is a Catholic paper and is "controlled by the Catholics."

It is easy to understand where this talk comes from. Unable to make a direct reply to the Herald's arguments, the klan, true to its policy of working secretly and in the dark, is scattering insinuation and untruth.

The agents of the klan apparently believe that when they have labelled a man as a Catholic they have explained the antagonism to the klan and what it stands for.

No doubt they resort to the only weapon at their command. They have no principle to defend, and are unable to meet the Herald on its own plane of argument. The Herald, in its entire campaign against a movement that the editor sincerely believes to be a serious menace to America's free institutions and their future welfare, has never resorted to personalities. It has argued entirely against the principle, or lack of principle, animating the klan movement.

Its columns are open to the defense of the klan by any person who is willing to sign the defense argument. Why do not the believers in the movement, if they have a cause worth espousing, advance in the open? The whispered innuendo, the threat of secret boycott, the promise of personal violence—these are the brands of skulking cowardice.

We do not write this denial of these lying rumors because there is any stigma attached to being a Catholic that we would avoid. But simply for the purpose of keeping the facts straight, the editor of this paper rises to remark that he is not a Catholic, has never been a Catholic, never expects to be a Catholic, and that this paper is not controlled by any Catholic influence.

And further, it is not controlled by Protestant influence, or any other religious influence, if by that term is meant denominational creed or specific dogma.

We are trying to publish a newspaper that gives a square deal to all. We are not unaware that the churches of a community are the sentinels of its moral welfare, the means of its moral progress. We honor them alike. In practice it is the aim of this paper to follow the rule laid down by the late President Harding for the staff of the Marion Star:—"Treat all religious matter reverently."

On the Declaration of Independence the signature of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, a Catholic, stands for as much risk and sacrifice, as does the signature of John Hancock, the Puritan, or Thomas Jefferson, the free-thinker.

It is the splendid Americanism of these men, the eternal glory of their self-sacrifice, that we pay tribute to, and not to their religious convictions, when we oppose the organization that would set up in America a standard foreign to every ideal of the document of freedom that they signed.

We can think of nothing that more nearly expressed our own conception of the proper way to view the matter than the declaration of George Washington, in a letter to the Catholic, Lafayette:

"Being no bigot myself to any mode of worship, I am disposed to indulge the professors of Christianity in the choice of that road to heaven which to them shall seem most direct, plainest, easiest and least liable to exception."

It's a strange world where people decide great issues on personalities, gossip, lies and slander, and where the possession and expression of a sincere and honest opinion, voiced in what the advocate believes to be the highest and best interests of the republic, lead to abuse, misrepresentation and threatened boycott.

But an untroubled conscience yet permits of sound sleep and good digestion. The weather is superb, this community is moving forward in a steady march of progress, our subscription list is growing by leaps and bounds, we do each day an honest day's toil, and some nights, on checking up, are able to feel that we have accomplished something in the service of our fellow-man.

FINANCIAL CARTOONLETS

Life in Klamath continues to be pleasant in spite of the petty machinations of those who spend their time in such unworthy and contemptible pursuits as those alluded to above.

In spite of the lies, we shall continue to express such opinions and ideas as a feeble mind may, from time to time, be favored with; to honor our Creator in our own way, as is our guaranteed right under the American constitution, and to lend such small service to the advancement of the community as opportunity may afford us.

As for the liars, we assume that they will continue to lie.

LOCAL SPORTSMAN PREDICTS VICTORY FOR YANKEE HORSE

Langell Valley, Oregon
October 17, 1934

Editor Herald:
America has been very successful in boxing, tennis, golf and many other sporting events during 1933. Can we repeat in the great international race next Saturday at Belmont Park, New York, when Papyrus, the great English thoroughbred, contests for supremacy of the turf with Zev, the American entry.

Zev, the American three-year-old, is, barring Man-of-War, undoubtedly the best race horse this country has produced in years. During the present season he has won the Kentucky derby, and all the principal stakes at Saratoga and other racing points. His winnings for 1933 amount to nearly $150,000.

Papyrus won the English classic, the Epsom derby, last June, in a field of 19 starters, and also the St. Leger stakes. He is conceded to be the crack three-year-old of the English turf. The English derby race at Epsom Downs, 20 miles from London, is conceded to be the most classic race in the world. It was named after Lord Derby, famous English sportsman, who won the first derby in 1785, and it has been the highest goal of the thoroughbred ever since.

If parliament happens to be in session on Derby day it adjourns for the event. The royal family, the elite of London, and from all the chief cities of Europe, attend. The annual attendance averages over half a million.

The course is turf, distances a mile and one-half. It is a left-handed course, and consists of two straight and a rather sharp turn, known as Toilemham corner. Turf tracks are not considered as fast as our dirt tracks. The record for the race is 2 minutes, 35 seconds, made in 1920 by Spinon Kop.

The race is open to the world. America has had starters in the English derby for nearly every year in the last 40 years, but won it but once. The French have been successful twice, and Austria once.

Scallions carry a weight of 122 pounds, fillies and geldings 3 pounds less.

This writer is of the opinion that in Saturday's race Zev has the advantage of the English horse, as Papyrus crossed the Atlantic less than 40 days ago, and Zev has won all his races on dirt tracks. Steve Donoghue, the great English jockey, who has won five derbies during his riding career, will pilot Papyrus.

Zev will be ridden by Earle Sande, the premier American jockey, who by the way, is a native of Oregon City, Oregon.

In my opinion, providing it is an ideal racing day, to defeat Zev, the English horse will have to cover the distance of one mile and a half in 2 minutes and 30 seconds, or better.

REX BORD VOUCHES FOR THE TRUTH OF THIS

"Are you a good runner?" asked a Merrill rancher of a tenderfoot applying for a job on his ranch. The tenderfoot said he was.

"Well," said the rancher, "you can round up the sheep." After several hours the new hand returned, perspiring and all out of breath.

"I got the sheep all right," he retorted, "but I had a fierce time getting the lambs."

"The lambs?" said the rancher.

"I haven't any lambs."

"Well," replied the tenderfoot, "they are in the corral." Thereupon the rancher went to investigate. In the corral with the exhausted sheep he found a dozen panting jack-rabbits.

THE SHOPPER'S SATURDAY NIGHT

He tells each day from morn to setting sun:
By sweat of brow his weekly wage is won.
With wife and babe he plods his weary way,
And mingles with the crowd Saturday.

A pair of shoes the little one has need:
A trinket for a wife who knows not greed;
A store of needed food—something to smoke—
He pays the rent and starts anew—dead broke.

At The Theatres

AT THE PINE TREE

"The Little Church Around the Corner," the popular stage play that has held the interest of millions of theatre-goers has been made into a motion picture by the Warner Brothers and it will be shown at the Pine Tree theatre, Sunday and Monday. It was made from the play by Charles Blaney, and it was directed by William A. Selter.

An exceptionally large cast of well-known screen players were engaged to interpret the varied roles in this romantic melodrama, the underlying theme of which is that there is a little church in every person's heart. It was produced with exacting care, and the film is said to contain a thrilling series of incidents resulting in a startling climax.

It is the story of Leila Morton, the lovely daughter of a millionaire mine owner, and her sweetheart, David Graham, a young social worker who thinks the poor should be given a square deal. The two fall in love with each other, but difficulties arise when David has to take sides between the poor and the rich. How he wins both the poor and the rich to the place where they work together, and how at the same time he wins the girl whom he had almost lost by his idealistic practices, form high points in the story.
