START PRIVATE FISH HATCHERY

John Ramsdale And Henry Stout Establish New Enterprise

A private fish hatchery to produce fish for commercial purposes is being established about four miles north of Chiloquin by Henry Stout, former deputy game warden, and John Ramsdale, formerly in charge of the Crooked Creek hatchery.

Buildings have been erected and ponds prepared for the new enterprise. A shipment of 20,000 eastern brook trout is en route to the hatchery. Fish will be sold to restaurants and hotels, or otherwise, in accordance with the state laws.

Both Stout and Ramsdale are thoroughly experienced in that line and their enterprise is being watched with interest by local sportsmen.

CHALLENGE ISSUED FOR RACE WITH KLAMATH CO. HORSE

A challenge has been issued by T. J. Armstrong, trainer, to any horse in southern Oregon for a race with Slats, a Klamath county horse, owned by C. F. Snelling of Lakeview.

Slats recently cleaned up at Grants Pass and has a string of victories won elsewhere to his credit. Slats backers are anxious for a race with any fast saddle horse in these parts, and are confident that he can beat them all.

GAME WARDEN WARNS YOUTHS HUNTING WITHOUT LICENSE

Youths hunting across the California line without a license will hereafter be out of luck if they fall into the clutches of Game Warden Fred Richardson. The California law provides that persons able to carry a gun are subject to the license law, while the age is set at 14 years in Oregon. Boys have been wandering across the state line, says Richardson, and while he has been lenient in the past, he is going to start things if the violations continue.

The fine is $25 to $250, ten to 150 days in jail, or both. Fred Fry of Dunsmuir was arrested by Richardson and fined $25 by Justice of the Peace Wilkins at Dorris for hunting after sundown.

AMERICAN GIRLS TO INVADE ENGLAND TO WIN HOCKEY HONORS

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—Fifteen American girls will sail from New York January 12 to seek field hockey honors in England. They are members of the All-United States team selected at the recent intercity tournament in this city to represent America at the international competition in London in March. Prior to the international tournament they will tour England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, playing a series of matches with the leading elevens.

These young women have booked passage on the steamship Majestic. Because of the scarcity of funds in the treasury of the National Girls' Field Hockey Association, each member of the team will pay her own expenses to and from England. While abroad they will be entertained by the British teams. They plan to return to America shortly after the close of the international tournament March 8.

The schedule of matches follows: January 26, All-England touring team at London; 28th, West at

SELECTION OF NEW COACH FOR OREGON TO BE MADE SOON

EUGENE, Ore., Jan. 3.—Selection of a football coach for the University of Oregon to succeed "Shy" Huntington, who resigned recently, may be made at any time now, according to an announcement by Virgil Earl, athletic director at the university.

Twelve men are being considered, Earl said, and it is highly probable one of these will be chosen. Applications have been received from the following: R. O. Cartwright, coach at the University of Nevada; M. A. Pickering, former assistant coach at the University of Minnesota; J. H. Richards, head coach at the University of Wisconsin for six years, now a resident of Los Angeles; C. W. Reynolds, coach at Bucknell; Norman C. Price, assistant to Alonzo Stagg at the University of Chicago, and Stanley Borleske or North Dakota Agricultural college, a brother of Vincent Borleske of Whitman college.

S. E. ALASKA TO SEEK STATEHOOD

Panhandle Residents Meanwhile Content With New Territory

JUNEAU, Alaska, Jan. 3.—Statehood for the southeastern part of Alaska, the Panhandle, is expected soon to be asked of congress. Meanwhile residents of that district, expressing themselves in a convention here last month, have asked congress to form the territory of South Alaska.

This part of Alaska embraced, when the census of 1920 was taken, 21,435 of Alaska's population of 57,000, living in 115,000 of the 550,384 square miles of the north-eastern corner of the North American continent that President Lincoln's secretary of state, William H. Seward, bought from Russia for $7,000,000.

The proposed territory or state, for whose formation the convention prepared two memorials to congress and framed a suggested organic act, would include all the first judicial division of Alaska in its present status and about one-third of the third judicial division. The first division is the Panhandle, a strip running about twenty miles wide between British Columbia and the Pacific Ocean. The third division is southwestern Alaska, including all the southern coast running from the northern end of the Panhandle far out to the end of the Aleutian Islands.

The promoters of separate statehood for South Alaska were inspired, according to numerous formal publications, by the desire to be set off from the second judicial division, vast western and northern Alaska, with Nome as its best known point, and the fourth division, interior Alaska, with Fairbanks, often called "the Chicago of the north," as its metropolis.

The two memorials to congress stated the request of the Panhandle to be formed into the territory of South Alaska and that "in confirmation that the people residing there desire that the drainage area of Prince William Sound and Copper River should be incorporated with the first division" had been received. One of the memorials set forth that "the people of southeastern Alaska would welcome inclusion in the separate territory for which they pray of said drainage area of Prince William Sound and Copper River and the territory east thereof or any part of it if it be the desire of the people thereof and of congress."

Lively agitation for a separate state for South Alaska began last summer when the late President Harding, on his return to Seattle, said in his last address, six days before his death: "Alaska is destined for ultimate statehood. In a very few years we can well set off the Panhandle and a large block of the connecting southeastern part as a state."

Scott C. Bone, governor of Alaska, said recently that the desire for statehood was "perfectly natural and logical, based on the arguments of proponents of division of the territory that southeastern Alaska's resources and interests are different from those of other sections."

CURATES SCARCE IN ENGLAND

LOUGHBOROUGH, Jan. 3.—Canon Briggs of this town is much concerned at the lack of curates, which he thinks will make the filling of high offices in the church 20 years hence very difficult. The canon says he has advertised for a curate in the most likely church papers for several weeks in succession, and has not yet received a single inquiry.
