Called to Denver—

Willard L. Smith, drainage engineer of the U. S. R. S., left Sunday morning for Denver where he was called on account of the serious illness of his father.

Successful Fishermen—

Dr. Paul M. Noel, Floyd McMillan, Leon W. Neamth, Louis McClure, G. A. Halliwell, R. Busman and M. Crenshaw spent the week end fishing on the upper Klamath lake and reported a nice catch of lake trout. The fishermen cut holes in the ice and enticed the hungry trout with minnows. This method was successful, it was indicated by the catch brought home Sunday night.

Marriage License Issued—

A marriage license was issued to Jimmy Bakess of Beatty, an Indian and a farmer, and Bessie Watah, an Indian, also of Beatty.

Here From Bonanza—

John Bradley, resident of Bonanza was called to town yesterday to testify in the case of Pablo Montes. Court adjourned, however, before he was called to the stand. Also seen on Main street yesterday was George Trammel, Klamath county farmer.

Down From Chiloquin—

George Chaastain, bookkeeper for a lumber company at Chiloquin, was in town yesterday on business. At one time Chaastain was the clerk of the circuit court.

Hampshire Man Here—

PREMIER LENINE OF RUSSIA DEAD

of even such important associates as Trotsky, who opposed what they termed a disgraceful peace, Lenin pushing through his plan. The already existing fraternization between Russian and German soldiers at the front was urged on to tremendous proportions and after a few months of the soviet regime, Russia had signed the treaty of Brest-Litovsk and was definitely out of the world conflict.

Turned to Rebuilding.

In 1921, when the soviet government had swept aside all military opposition, and when Russia was practically intact in communist hands, except for Poland, Finland and the Baltic provinces, which soon broke off and formed independent republics, Lenin turned his hands to the task of building up Russia the revolution had destroyed. To achieve this reconstruction, Lenin, with the daring that characterized all of his major plans, began what he called a strategic retreat from communism. A communistic Utopia might be possible in years to come, he said, but the active communism as practiced during the period of the civil war had never been intended as permanent. It was purely a war measure, and so in an epochal speech, delivered in November, 1921, Lenin publicly announced the failure of past policies, and explained the need for an economic departure. "We met with a bad defeat and have undertaken a strategic retreat," he admitted. "Before they have thrashed us definitely, let us retreat and construct everything over again, but more solidly." He proposed at least a partial re-establishment of capitalistic principles; a reversion to free trade; the imposition of taxes on land; abolishment of free transportation, and the acceptance of outside aid for the millions of starving Russians.

Greatest Intellectual Force.

Lenine was characterized by observers as the greatest intellectual force in the Russian revolution. He spoke German, French and English and read works on economic problems in all these languages as quickly as they could be received in Moscow. Having a world vision, and desiring a world revolution, he tried to keep in touch with the thought and affairs of all countries.

Lenine's supporters in the communist party treated him with something of a religious reverence, although they did consider him human enough to call him by the nickname, "Baldy." His picture has replaced the Ikon in thousands of Russian homes.

Lenine was married, but had no children. His wife, M. K. Oulava, commonly known as "Krupskaya," a plain little woman with thin iron gray hair, stood shoulder to shoulder with him through the most important period in his career, participating in the direction of the political education commission, and other communistic organizations. He also had a sister, who shared in his political fortune and had been business manager of one of the communist newspapers in Moscow.

Able to Laugh.

During all the darkest days of the civil war and red terror, when many of his associates lost their nerve, Lenine was able to laugh and joke. Foreign visitors during these times said they found him the only man in Russia with a sense of humor. He liked to slap visitors on the shoulders to play with his two kittens and to tell stories to his friends' children. But he was absolutely adamant and loss of human life was to him unimportant when weighed against the fate of the Bolshevik revolution.

After July 1 the thickness of a standard board of lumber will be 25-32 of an inch with a proviso for 26-32 inch boards in special specifications.

A British scientist experimenting with a stream-line filter along which liquids passed under pressure through thousands of tightly packed, perforated paper sheets, took the color out of red wine and tea and milk, leaving instead of the last named a tasteless fluid, like water.
