RECOGNITION WITH RESERVATIONS

PERHAPS in the hope of inducing the United States to extend full recognition to the present government of Russia, many newspapers have published the statement that Great Britain has extended unconditional recognition. A more careful inspection of the records in that regard shows that this representation is incorrect.

That this is true is demonstrated by the fact that George Tchitcherine, commissary for foreign affairs, complained bitterly of the kind of recognition Great Britain had extended. As Tchitcherine remarks, "In stead of leaving a feeling of full and complete satisfaction and joy, the British note leaves in the mind some doubt and a feel of vagueness of purpose."

The fact of the matter is that the labor party, which has just come into control of the government of Great Britain, is socialistic, but it is not of that extreme socialistic character represented by the bolshevist government of Russia.

There is some comfort in the philosophy that a man can get used to anything, such adjustments being so frequently necessary. By the School Board. We oft recall those childhood days though now we "miss" and "mutter" and recollect the red schoolhouse, where ignorance was "bliss"-tered.

Full recognition may yet be far in the distance, for the Russian government was merely invited to send to London authorized representatives to discuss all of the subjects mentioned above and to negotiate a comprehensive treaty.

It will be seen from this that although the Labor Administration of Great Britain has ostensibly extended recognition to Russia, yet the attitude of that government is practically the same as that of the United States as set forth in the public statements made by Secretary of State Hughes.

Whether the leadership in Great Britain be under Lloyd George or Baldwin or Macdonald, that government will be one which recognizes the binding obligation of its own national undertakings, and it will respect the rights of private property.

Great Britain, like the United States, stands ready to grant full recognition to the Russian government whenever it complies with its demands. Great Britain has gone no farther than the United States is willing to go, although the steps to be taken may be somewhat different.

OUR OWN HYDRA-HEADED MONSTER

The Office Cat

The place downtown where I occasionally eat had "Sur Loin Steak" and "seley soup" on the bill of fare, says Harry Bard, and in the dessert section of the card was "angel food."

As we understand it, New York's intention is to drive out all crooks who don't pay office rent.

Be ambitious—but don't begin at the top. No man is as stingy as his poor kin claim he is.

Personally, I am not opposed to rouage, admits L. E. Lewis, but when we get interested in a young lady we wonder how she would look if her face was clean.

A tactful husband is one who knows how to apologize gracefully when his wife offends him.

Stealing, even if you are not caught, makes you a thief. Here's exciting radio news. Dishpans are being used for antennae.

C. B. Koozer says a good many people who talk about common sense have none. Head the Office Cat.

Don't be a grouch and wear a frown if you expect to thrive. "This not the proper attitude To keep a biz alive.

No grouch was ever known to "draw" Nor frown to boost a sale. And those who gumble at their work Are almost sure to fail.

So face each "prospect" with a smile, To keep sweet tempered—try; Always get 'em laughing, And they'll come and—buy!

Nature knows her business, She gives most of the children to people who know nothing about scientific methods of raising children.

A Promising Entry

Said a voice at the telephone: "Hallo, hello! Is this the gas company's office?" "Yes, what is it?"

"When do the entries for the next races open?" "We don't know anything about entries or races. This is the gas office."

"I am aware of that, but I thought you could tell me." "Why? What do you want to know for?"

"Oh, nothing in particular. I have a gas meter I would like to enter, that's all."

E. E. Koppen says run away from difficulties and you won't go a long way. The boss offered a Klamath Falls clerk an interest in the business the other day. He said: "If you don't take an interest in the business, I will fire you."

Civilization is advancing. They are now designing a law to make marriage more difficult.

LAST LAUGH WENT TO TRAFFIC COP

SPOKANE, Wash., Feb. 27.—The time-worn but ever applicable phrase about "he who laughs last, etc." got off to a fresh start here recently with a motorist of this city and the law, as the principal actors.

It has been the custom here to withdraw some of the motorcycle policemen during the winter and one resident of the city knew of this custom and also knew where one of the officers lived.

Soon after the order became effective this motorist began to speed past the policeman's house, generally favoring the windows with wide grins. This incident became almost a daily occurrence but he failed to take into consideration the increasing mood weather.

With the reinstatement of the mounted squad one of the first victims proved to be the motorist and his captor was the policeman. The judge, perceiving a humorous side to the situation, imposed a light sentence.

REPORT OF J. C. HENDERSON

ful possibilities for a recreation center that would be unique in the western states, and which could be duplicated in but a few parts of the world. If the city should acquire the Hot Springs tract, close Spring street from Park Place to the canal, and purchase lots 1 to 14 on the east side of Spring street, a large area would be available for a center. I am informed that this property can be secured for about $40,000. By utilizing the water from the springs, a pool or system of pools could be installed and there would also be room for an athletic field, tennis courts and a children's playground.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, then, I will summarize my recommendations: 1. A year round recreation director, probably paid jointly by schools and city.

2. A community house, under public auspices and built and supported by public funds.

3. Creation of small neighborhood playgrounds usually in conjunction with a school.

4. Development of Riverside park as an athletic field.

5. Consideration of Hot Springs Recreation project.

I will also renew my offer: to have suggested lay-outs made for the various areas provided I am furnished with detail maps of these areas.

I wish to thank the various organizations and citizens of Klamath Falls for the courtesies extended to me, and to assure them that I shall be only too glad to be of any further assistance possible.

JOHN C. HENDERSON, Supervisor of Recreation, 318 City Hall, Portland, Oregon.

State leader of girls' club, Miss Helen Cowgill, visited the Shasta View school Monday afternoon and was very much pleased with the work done and also said she was delighted to see such good work going on in the county and the interest taken by the children was very gratifying.

State supervisor of Jackson county schools, accompanied Miss Cowgill and was very much interested in the county unit plan. Said she could see that every school she visited in Klamath county and Jackson county is working for it. The county club leader, Frank Hexton, was present and we well know his whole heart is in club work and is very much pleased with the children's interest.

O. E. Hunt and son Cecil of Klamath Falls were visiting the Hunt ranch here the last of the week.

POWER OF KINGS AND QUEENS IN EUROPE IS LESS

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—Greece's calm dismissal of its king and queen has provoked comment among the democratic newspapers of Germany concerning the new spirit which has come over the world since 1910, when a great majority of the world's population lived under kings and queens.

The Bonsecourier calls attention to the fact that 20 years ago there were only about 150,000,000 persons living under republican governments, and those were chiefly in North and South America. Today the paper estimates that about 57 per cent of the world's population, which is 1,650,000,000, is living in republics, and these figures permit all of the British empire to be classed as a monarchy.

Until 1910 France and Switzerland were the only republics in Europe, and nine-tenths of Europe was under kings. Today there are only about 175,000,000 Europeans under kings out of an estimated total population of 450,000,000, and the Bonsecourier regards some of the so-called European monarchies as being of such uncertain character that further changes may be expected any time.

Portugal, China, Russia, Austria, Germany and Turkey have all deserted the monarchical group within the last 15 years, leaving only about 790,000,000 persons as subjects of kings at the opening of 1924.

ROLLER CANARY BIRDS COST $75

SPOKANE, Wash., Feb. 27.—Four roller canary birds of international standing have been purchased by Mrs. E. P. Williams, a bird fancier of this city, and arrived here recently from San Francisco.

The feathered aristocrats cost $75 each, are 10 months old and have green plumage. They took gold medal awards in the International Breeders' association contest held in San Francisco last month.

The birds will be used for breeding purposes.
