

FINDS CONTENTMENT IN BOILER AFTER SEARCH OF EIGHTY YEARS

GAINESVILLE, Fla., March 27.—Forty-six years ago he left Germany, after serving in two wars. He said that he was a true cousin of Kaiser Wilhelm, but cousin or no cousin, he wanted no more of fighting.

In America he found no wars. But he found that here, as everywhere, men live in combat of wits, that all of life is a battle. And so as a crusader seeking peace for himself he set out on a long journey—that ended when he found that old boiler alongside the road.

When he died it was found that he had saved $55 in small coins against burial in a pauper's grave. And when he was laid away there were tears in the eyes of those who had understood the love of peace that had been in the heart of "The Old Man Who Lived in a Boiler."

Several years ago he shuffled his palsied way down the road to Gainesville, burdened with more than four-score years. His joints ached with rheumatism and his heart with a longing for peace and contentment.

There, along the road, was a rusty, discarded boiler. He crept into it to find a moment's surcease from the strife of the passing world. Within, it seemed there was a little world all his own.

And so John Mueller fixed a bunk for himself. He obtained an oil stove. He found that his rheumatic pains left him. The peace he had sought all his life was his at last.
