GREENS FOR ALL SUMMER

"Greens" form an important factor in the all-season diet and any small garden may produce a sufficient supply by planting spinach in the early spring and then following it with the main dependence, Swiss chard. The chard is a beet which does not form a big root, but gives great quantity of leaves and is one of the finest materials for greens that can be grown. It grows as easily as the common beet, grown for its roots, and produces all season. When young, the entire plant may be pulled to thin the row and then the leaves may be cut from the remaining plants and others will follow.

The chard is the main dependence for all season greens, but it may be enhanced with dandelions which are common enough, as a rule, without introducing them into the garden and form the earliest spring crop for greens. Mustard, sown for greens, does not receive the attention it deserves. It is a short season crop and small plantings should be made at intervals and used as soon as large enough, as it soon runs to seed. Mustard is particularly valuable to add to beets and spinach for the pungency of its flavor, adding considerably to the tastiness of the dish. It is also excellent by itself.

In European countries, lettuce is boiled for greens, but it does not strike the American palate, as it is rather insipid and loses the crispness and flavor it possesses in a salad.

For late greens, all winter from the open ground, in fact, the kale makes the year's cycle. The kale is a member of the cabbage family, but does not form a head. It makes a rosette of long curly leaves, frilled like those of parsley and will withstand the coldest weather and may be cut at any time during the winter months. It has a mild flavor somewhat suggestive of cabbage. It is grown in the same way as late cabbage, planting the seed in July and transplanting 2 to 2 1/2 feet apart. Dwarf Curled and Excelsior Moss Curled are excellent varieties. A few plants of kale will give a supply of "greens" for the winter table which will be a welcome variety. It needs precisely the same soil and cultural requirements as late cabbage. Corn salad is also hardy and is much used in winter in place of lettuce.

WIRED from the START

If you are so fortunate as to be building a new home, don't you want it to be as convenient in its appointments as you can afford to make it—from the start?

Every housekeeper sooner or later wants the help of electrical equipment in her housework. The proper placing of electrical outlets greatly increases their utility, and if you are building—now is the time to install them most economically.

Apart from relieving housework from its drudgery, electrical equipment is a decided economy. Under the lines of this Company you can operate an electric range, a vacuum cleaner, water heater, washing machine and lights for the low average cost of $8.50 a month!

Moreover, the future abundance of electric power and its reasonable cost is assured you by the increasing plant output—now valued at $11,700,000—which the Company is placing at your service. To be sure that your home is correctly wired for all household purposes, experts at our offices or at your electrical dealer's will be only too glad to show you the best way to go about it, give you complete cost information and the benefit of their experience in other homes they have helped to build.

KLAMATH BEATEN IN LIVELY GAME

In a baseball game, which for heart-breaking thrills has been seldom equalled in Klamath Falls, Grants Pass high school, fresh from a victory of 1 to 3 over Ashland, defeated Klamath county high school by a score of 16 to 15, at Modoc Park Saturday afternoon.

The last half of the ninth saw Klamath Falls hopelessly behind with a lead of five to overcome. Vernon Moore, pitcher and second man up singled. With a man on base Klamath Falls took heart and run after run was chalked up as each batter smashed out safe hits.

With a man on third and two outs, first baseman Maler stepped to the bat. Stepping into a fast one he connected solidly and he ball soared towards center field. For a moment it looked like a safe hit but the center fielder of Grants Pass made a running catch and the game was over.

From start to finish the game was close. Moore for Klamath pitched a splendid game as was evidenced by the few solid hits made by Grants Pass. The weak spot in Klamath's team was the infield, shown by 18 errors made by the local team as against three for the visitors.

Klamath county high school team will play a return game at Grant's Pass on May 3. The next game will be played at Modoc park next Saturday afternoon with Henley High school.
