

ROTARY IDEALS ARE EXPLAINED

International Body Hears of Standards of Conduct

TORONTO, June 18.—Thirty-six national, international and state or provincial trade and professional organizations have adopted codes of standard ethical practices for their members during the past year. Rotarians were told by Raymond M. Havena of Kansas City during the course of the second day's session of their international convention here today. There are 53 great national trade and professional organizations now operating with ethical codes binding their members to discard the old "let the buyer beware" and "business is business" idea and adopting the ideal that a business is only truly productive of profit to its owner as it gives service to the community in which it is established.

Progress Is Cited.

As Chairman of the International Committee on Business Methods, Mr. Havena, former international president of Rotary, told his fellow members from all over the world of the progress that had been made with the Rotary idea of unselfish service in business. Reports were presented from England, New Zealand, Japan, Cuba and other sections of the world. In England business ethics formed the basis of a course of lectures at one of its great universities and in this country members of the faculties of both Harvard and Yale have interested themselves in the matter.

High schools in different sections of the country have encouraged students to adopt codes of ethics and a study of business practices, the convention was told.

"Rotary Idea" Day.

This is "The Rotary Idea" day at the convention and the entire program is designed to show the progress that has been made in developing ethical practices in the business and professional world. John R. Williams, of Long Beach, California, chairman of the International Committee on Rotary Education, told the convention of the work of his committee in developing an understanding of the Rotary idea of service in individual Rotarians so that they could best act as missionaries to their business and professional associates.

Harry Bert Craddock, of Minneapolis, chairman of the Committee on Classifications, told of the work of classifying professions and businesses so that each individual member of Rotary would have a clear-cut classification in his club. He said a Rotary club is really a cross section of the business and professional community with but one man from each business or profession who is selected solely as being representative of his classification and to represent Rotary to his classification. Edward J. Cattell, of Philadelphia, Pa., made a stirring address on friendship and Rotary's idea in developing it.

This afternoon three special assemblies are being held to discuss club administrative problems and tonight the annual reception and ball by the international president will be given.

Flint Car Tests Sturdiness on 15,000 Mile Trip

Wm. Horstman and family of San Diego, Calif., who are making a 15,000-mile tour in a Flint car, were at the Mefford dealers, the Mason Motor company, having their car checked, as they do at every city where there is a Flint agency, and also had a picture taken in front of the Mason Motor Co., to send the company.

Mr. Horstman carries four passengers besides himself and with his baggage has 1702 lbs. weight besides the car. The trip is from San Francisco to Vancouver, over the Canadian Rockies and back through Idaho, Montana, Texas, New Mexico and Mexico and is a pleasure trip.

The Flint factory made Mr. Horstman the proposition that if he would own a stock car, give it care to the same and be checked at every agency along the road, they would guarantee the car to make the trip with only three services or give him a new car on his return.

Flint cars have been proving very popular in southern Oregon and A. R. Mason, head of Mason Motor company and F. R. Horn who supervises Flint sales report a growing enthusiasm in these parts for the latest of W. C. Durant's creations. Among the recent purchasers of Flint cars in southern Oregon are Dr. R. W. Clancy, Col. C. G. Thompson, A. C. Hubbard, George M. Roberts, F. R. Randler, Robert Gordon and Tom Merriman.

First Nighters Praise Pine Tree Offering

Four Clever Acts and Special Feature Proves Magnet to Draw Crowds.

Capacity houses greeted a good offering at the Pine Tree theatre last night, consisting of a four-act vaudeville road show and the gorgeous production, "Enemies of Women" from the story by Blasco Ibañez, who wrote "The Four Horsemen". The vaudeville end of the program began when Connie Mitchell presented imitations displaying unusual talent. As an imitator of the various birds and animals, he pleased. His back yard "Midnight Serenade," was cleverly done. Holly and Lee were next with a line of patter, closing with some good harmony singing and comedy numbers. Carr, Clifford and Carr gave a variety of musical comedy entertainment that seemed to hit right. The stage setting for this act is pretty and the costuming is attractive. Closing the bill came Daley, Mack and Daley, three of the best roller skaters seen here for many months. Good comedy is put over by one of the male members of the team. Several sensational spins are displayed throughout the act.

"Enemies of Women" by far one of the best picture offerings to be seen here for a long time, is one thrilling scene after another. Few motion pictures can boast of a greater expenditure of money than "Enemies of Women". The settings are magnificent. The scenes all laid in Paris, Nice and Monte Carlo, this by the way being the first time that a moving picture was ever made in Monte Carlo. The Great War scenes are accurate and will be recognized by most of the boys who went across.

For ten days before she undertakes it, a woman says every day, "I must wash my head today."

Liberty Picture Has Many Thrilling Scenes

"Scaramouche" Now Showing at Local Playhouse; Revolt of France Pictured.

They called him "the blackguard of Gavrilac." Yet they fell before his sword like chaff before the wind. Until at last he crossed blades with the enemy of his vengeance, the man he hated worst in the world—who was nearer to him than any other! And the flash of their clashing blades was like the stroke-of-death lightning after thunder. And then the lightning struck! Too late a woman came. Swinging, she fell into the wounded arms of la Tour d'Azyr. But to Andre-Louis Moreau that sight opened wounds deeper than flesh, cut him as no sword-thrust ever could!

Discerning Klamath Falls picture fans crowded the Liberty theater last night to see the opening showing of this wonderful film story of the French upheaval. The photograph work is superb and the tense situations that the producer as contrived to literally pile on top of each other, holds one breathless.

As an instructive, entertaining and absorbing photoplay, "Scaramouche" probably has few equals in the present silver screen world.

"Scaramouche" ran for weeks as a special attraction in San Francisco and those who saw it there were forced to pay high prices.

Manager Harry Poole will continue the picture's run for tonight only.

About 2000 years ago Ovid sang of strawberries, even before the strawberry shortcake was invented.

No wonder the movie business is in a slump. The titles have used up the supply of naughty adjectives.
