ATHLETIC LEADERSHIP.

America leads the world in athletics. The American Olympic team has won the track and field championship for the eighth time in succession.

It is getting to be monotonous. America always wins.

Why? Perhaps there are many answers. This country has a great population to choose from. Yet there are other countries more populous—Russia, China, India—that accomplish nothing in athletics.

More important is the fact that Americans have a keen and lively interest in physical exercise and sport, which tends to the development and discovery of good athletes. Still more important, perhaps, is the American spirit, which goes into every sort of human competition with a strong determination to win. American physique may be no better than that of many other nations. In fact, there is probably small difference in physique between the various civilized races. We may be safe in saying that victory in athletics, as in various other fields of human intelligence and will, helped of course by great numbers.

In this year's contest, perhaps numbers alone turned the trick for the United States. Little Finland won second place, with 166 points to America's 255, and all the rest far behind.

Finland, it may be observed, has the best educational record of all countries—the least illiteracy. Finland, evidently has no less intelligence and strength of will than America. It has only a little over 3,000,000 people—about as many as this country had at the time of the American Revolution. Its remarkable showing makes Americans rather humble about their latest victory. Morally, Finland is the real victor.

WORLD BROADCASTING.

Imagine a single system of radio broadcasting which would make one program audible at the same moment to the whole world. According to big radio meeting in London recently, this is what we shall have soon.

They say it will be done by large, central stations using short waves, transmitted long distances, and small local stations receiving and rebroadcasting the programs on their own wave lengths. Tests already made between England and the United States are said to prove the practicality of this method.

It is an appealing prospect, to radio fans if not to the entire public. But certain important questions naturally arise, such as these:

Who will wield the tremendous power of communication and publicity involved in such a system, and under what authority? How will programs be arranged? What language or languages will be used? What can be done if any government or private interest seizes this big opportunity and abuses it? Where will final responsibility rest? Will the League of Nations or some other international organization have to take charge of it?

MEXICO IS SHOCKED.

It is shocking to learn that Mexicans are shocked by knickers. American women tourists garbed in the knee-breeches now the vogue this side of the border have been turned back when they sought to cross over from Oklahoma. Mexican authorities are determined to protect their women from so barbarous a custom.

Never mind the fact that an American woman of unquestionable modesty regards herself as quite adequately dressed when attired in the atrocious knickers, along with the usual accessories, and that to the American eye, the primitive skirted costume usually observed on Mexican women leaves something to be desired. Style is style, and morals are morals, and the two are usually tangled up together very confusingly. Sooner or later, however, Mexican women will take to trousers or knickers or bloomers, and then it will be perfectly all right in Mexico to reveal the fact that Nature gave women, as well as men, two legs to stand on and walk with. And by that time, perhaps our women will all have gone back to long skirts again, and Americans will be scandalized even to look across the Rio Grande with field glasses.

Brooklyn, N. Y., is forced to war against an invasion of caterpillars. Oh, well, it might be worse. If Kaiser Bill had carried out his felonious little plan, they'd be fighting caterpillar tractors.

A big American railroad man says he has succeeded by "always giving the other fellow the best of the bargain." Some day, that man will meet his Waterloo. Some sneaking rival will insist on giving him a good bargain.

"More than a fourth of the men who composed the A. E. F. could not write their own names." Still, they were not mute, inglorious Miltons. They wrote history.

A New York policeman has been highly applauded for returning a valuable piece of jewelry he found. Is that sort of thing so rare on the sidewalks of New York?

American civilization, an English novelist thinks, is founded on wheat cakes. Sure it isn't hot dogs?

Vaudeville Program at Pine Tree Theatre Tonight

Another well balanced vaudeville road show opens today at the Pine Tree theatre for a two-day run in conjunction with Rupert Hughes' divorce story "Reno." The vaudeville program is headed by Fred Schwartz and Co., presenting "The Broken Mirror," said to be one of the funniest acts on the road and one that Mr. Schwartz has presented all over the world. Harry Gilbert will offer "Character Snapshots" consisting of his own songs and patter. Daly and Gray have an act called "The Height of Ignorance," written for laughing purposes, having a wealth of new material, including songs and dances. Bernad and Betts are xylophonists, offering one of the funniest and classiest musical acts in vaudeville. The popular priced matinee is proving very popular at the Pine Tree. Manager Chase presents the same complete show that is given at night.

HUNT'S WASHINGTON LETTER

By HARRY H. HUNT NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The Republicans are better players at the game of politics than are the Democrats. They seldom miss a trick, unless the lay of the cards is absolutely against them. They not only count their trumps and keep track of every play that is made, but they often anticipate moves several leads ahead and thus are able to fatten their score.

Witness the manner in which the Congressional Record, official publication of Congress, was manipulated so as to provide a free medium for the distribution of Republican campaign material.

Prior to the adjournment of Congress on June 7, a resolution from the joint committee on printing was adopted, providing that the last issue of the Record, for the current session of Congress, should be published "not later than Tuesday, June 24, 1924."

Then, quite casually, Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire asked for and received permission to "extend his remarks in the Record."

This "leave" is permission to have published in the record statements not made on the floor of Congress or speeches or documents by others than members of Congress. It is a favor normally granted by courtesy, without dispute or discussion, and was accorded Moses without objection.

With those two moves made, the cards were all stacked for the little game ahead. The Republican convention at Cleveland was convened on Tuesday, June 10. Congress was adjourned, and no more "leaves to print" could be granted.

On Wednesday, June 18, following the Republican convention, Moses submitted to the Public Printer, as the "extension of remarks" for which permission had been granted, the Republican keynote speech of Theodore E. Burton. It was duly inserted in the Record for that date.

This publication in the Record makes Burton's keynote speech eligible for mailing, under government frank. In other words, it enables the Republican campaign committee to have it sent, postage free, to every voter in the country.

Thousands upon thousands of dollars in postage will thus be saved to the party's treasury. The cost will be borne by the government, from taxes collected from Democrats as well as Republicans.

Well, you ask, couldn't the Democrats do the same stunt? Couldn't they have Pat Harrison's keynote speech at New York "extended" in the same manner, and made similarly eligible for mailing at public expense?

moon. Naturally, it "missed" the edition! In addition to the Republican keynote speech, the post-session issues of the Record also carried, under other "leaves to extend," the text of the G. O. P. platform, and a detailed exposition of Republican achievements. Both of which, thereby, become postage free for campaign purposes. And all of which become so many trumps for the Republicans.

Mothers-in-Law Neglected Liberty Photoplay Shows

The roster of the great around whom the world's history revolves is limited by no means to kings, queens and statesmen. If you look long and hard enough you will discover that practically every occupation, no matter how lowly and unpopular, has made its humble contribution to the ranks of the famous sometime between the days of prehistoric man and prohibition. Relying on this fact B. P. Chulberg, producer of Preferred Pictures, set out recently to dig up some historical data on that particularly maligned species he is doing his own bit to immortalize in his Gasnier production, "Mothers-in-Law" now at the Liberty theatre. The result of his research brings out the startling revelation that since the annals of history were first started there has never been a single enduring record set down concerning the relative whom almost everybody acquiesces at least once in a lifetime and who plays so conspicuous a role in domestic happiness, or unhappiness.

PASTURAGE FOR HERDS OFFERED

If California cattle are permitted to enter Oregon for pasturage as requested by the stockmen of the south no herds should be brought that are now beyond the 15-mile limit as recently established during the hoof and mouth quarantine, according to the recommendations of Dr. Lytle, state veterinarian, to Governor Pierce as received here this afternoon.

Dr. Lytle made an inspection of the situation here during the week-end and today turned over his official report to Governor Walter Pierce.

SALEM, July 22.—Only cattle in the 15-mile zone south of the Oregon border should be permitted to enter Oregon for feeding, Dr. Lytle state veterinarian, recommended today to the governor, after an inspection of the ranges in Klamath county. Lytle said the grass in Klamath county is not sufficient to care for the Oregon herds. The investigation was made in response to a California request for pasturage for cattle now in the forest fire swept regions.

RADIO IS WEATHER PRODUCER OF NOTE. FAN MAKES REPORT

Someday old J. Pluvius may realize the advantages of modern radio transmission and cease to dispense solid, old-fashioned hot and cold, wet and dry weather, and begin serving a kind of psychological radio weather.

Whether radio waves could even carry the atmosphere of the play has long been doubted by the skeptical. But, according to Howard I. Milholland, studio manager of KGO, the General Electric Station, today's mail indicates that both kinds of atmosphere may be delivered by radio.

"I want to tell you," writes Emma F. Rucker, of Piedmont, California, "that I listened in to your play 'Seven Keys To Baldpate,' and found myself shivering, so realistic was the wind whistling around the old inn out on the mountain side. And before I thought I requested the maid to bring me a shawl, much to the amusement of the family."

And here's the admission that the atmosphere of the play got over also. "I suppose that in radio drama the quality of the voice is a very important factor," continues Miss Rucker. "Mary's voice sounded particularly right for the character. I found that I was able to picture her quite readily, and when she was talking I found myself getting the atmosphere of the play."

The Value of the Dairy Cow

The dairy cow is by far the most economical producer of human food. The food produced by her is the most nourishing and helpful of all foods. The farmer who has a few dairy cows, a few chickens and a garden will always have plenty of food for himself and family besides having a surplus of dairy and poultry products to sell at good prices.

For each 100 pounds of food consumed the sheep produces only 2 1/2 pounds of edible food solids, a steer a trifle less than three pounds, a hen about five pounds, a hog about 5 1/2 pounds and the average dairy cow 18 pounds.

There are nearly 24 million dairy cows in the United States and the annual value of their product reaches the enormous figure of over one billion dollars. Only the corn crop exceeds dairy products as a source of income to the farmers of the nation.

The dairy cow brings in money all the year around. She brings in cash at the end of each month in the form of a check from the creamery and gives us additional profit each year in the form of a calf. What a cow produces today is sold tomorrow. If she produces when the market price of feed is high. There is small chance of having to
