Neglecting Old Customers to Go After New Ones

It's more spectacular to bring in a new customer than it is to keep an old one happy, but the same attention from you your old customers deserve that your prospects receive. Well printed booklets, folders, and illustrated letters are worth their weight in gold. If they keep your customers aware that you are interested in their needs.

The Screen

At the Liberty

The regulation, sterotyped cliff fight where the hero metes out a just unishment to the "heavy" is well known to all theatregoers, but in LUCKY DAN you will see a fight which we defy any one to duplicate on the screen. After pushing the "heavy" over the side of a 200 foot cliff, Dan dives head first after him and they both meet up with a thump at the bottom. A real thrill, the like of which has never been equalled. At the Liberty tonight only.

Seldom has the casting of a picture presented more or greater difficulties than Thomas H. Ince's powerful drama, "The Marriage Cheat," in which Leatrice Joy, Percy Marmont and Adolphe Menjou are the principles, and which will be seen at the Liberty Theatre beginning Sunday.

It was in the selection of featured players that Director John Griffith Wray encountered difficulties, however, but in the enlistment of more than 200 Kanaka types essential to the picture, for its action is largely confined to the distant Southern Pacific island of Hiti Huti.

Although a production company was sent to the romantic isle of Tahiti to secure an accurate atmospheric background for the story, native types were required fo rother scenes shot at the Ince studios in Culver City, California.

The casting director expected no obstacles, knowing that hundreds of Kanakas were registered at the service bureaus, but when they began to apear in response to his call it was found that nine out of ten of the girls had bobbed their hair. And the majority of the men had adopted modern haircuts, many with sheik sideburns!

AT THE PINE TREE

For weeks and weeks the bobbed hair girl bandit of Brooklyn had scores of detectives and uniformed police and even private sleuths on the lookout day and night to effect her capture. This girl's activities were so pronounced that the New York police sent out word to every man on the force to get her "dead or alive." This bobbed bandette in her banditry was unlike Michael Lanyard, the famous robber of Louis Joseph Vance's sensational novel, "The Lone Wolf," as she was always accompanied on her trips to the butcher, the baker and drug-stores in particular by a tall chap she called "Al" during her holdups. She and Al invariably made their getaway in a Ford coupe.

In "The Lone Wolf," Lanyard amazed not only the greatest sleuths of all time but he was admired by the most notorious of all underworld societies, "The Pack," for his daring and success. In the picturization of the Vance novel, Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt are co-starred, Miss Dalton portraying the role of a female bandit who is later revealed as a secret service operative of Uncle Sam's. Holt is Lanyard, "The Lone Wolf." These are some of the most thrilling scenes ever screened.

Pine Tree today.

Douglas MacLean's newest comedy piece, "The Yankee Consul," will make its first appearance upon the local screen at the Pine Tree Sunday and Monday. This exceptionally funny film was adapted from the Broadway musical comedy stage hit of twenty years ago which first presented Raymond Hitchcock to the public. While it was an acknowledged success as a play, it proves a bigger laughing vehicle for MacLean than his recent "Going Up" which was uproariously funny.

MacLean has surrounded himself by a most capable and clever company of players, including the comely and fascinating Patsy Ruth Miller as the heroine. Others are Stanhope Wheatcroft, Arthur Stuart Hull, Eulalie Jensen, George Periolat, Fred Kelsey, L. C. Shumway, Eric Mayne, Gerald Pring and Bert Hadley.

The picture was directed by James W. Horne, the same man who directed MacLean so cleverly in "The Hottentot" and it is unquestionably the best work that Horne has yet done.

Laughable scenes are worked around the embarrassment that a rich young American finds himself when carried out to sea, but finds himself possessed of tickets and passport of the Yankee Consul to a South American station, which prove a life-saver.

To the strange land he goes and naturally a pretty girl needs just the sort of help that an unattached Yankee dan rander. Naturally all things end well for the youthful lovers.

Th Duke of Belford's gold plate at Woburn Abbey is amoung the most magnif'cent collections of its kind in the world. So highly, however, was it regarded by the eight Duke, that on his death, in 1872, gold plate worth tens of thousands of dollars was found strewn about the floor of his house in Belgrave Square in such a deplorable condition that it narrowly escaped being consigned to the dustbin as worthless metal.

SENTENCE PATE AND SULLIVAN

manslaughter. The date of Taylor's sentence was set for today, but owing to Judge Leavitt's absence in Jacksonville, the sentence was continued till Tuesday by Judge Thomas at the motion of the district attorney's office.

Verdict Early Today

When the verdict was brought in early this morning, only a scattered few were present. The verdict was handed to the bailiff by D. Ellis Young, foreman. The jury which returned the verdict was composed of the following 12 men: Mr. Young, L. J. Bean, James Blair, R. S. Beasley, Cal Icenbice, U. E. Reeder, Max Chilcote, C. H. Knowles, W. B. Brown, Levi J. Griffith, J. H. Covert and W. H. Pankey.

The case was handed to the jury at 12:20 a. m. this morning, following instructions to the jury by Judge C. M. Thomas. Final arguments were completed shortly before midnight. For the state, District Attorney William Ganong ably summarized the evidence in the opening statement, pointing out the discrepancies in the testimony of defense witnesses. He took occasion to thank the officers, present and past, in their cooperation with the state.

Defense Attorneys Plea

S. A. Jetmore of Lakeview and William Duncan, in their final arguments on behalf of the defense, strove to swing the tide towards Sullivan by impassioned pleas. They held that the state had not proved their case, that not sufficient corroborative evidence had been advanced by the state to support John Taylor's confession and that the alibi of Sullivan was impregnable.

W. P. Myers, deputy district attorney, for one hour lashed Pete Sullivan in the final statement of the state. His talk could be clearly heard a block from the court house. He called attention to the testimony of Mike Murphy, whose statements on the stand he claimed were proved to be unreliable.

After the case had been given into the hands of the jury, Judge Thomas, before recess of the court, thanked the lawyers on both sides and the court house attaches for courteous and considerate treatment during the course of the trials.

Three Convicted

Three of the four men arrested on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the Erickson murder must serve long sentences in the state penitentiary. John Taylor will be sentenced to serve from one to 15 years in the penitentiary. Pate and Sullivan, implicated in the crime by Taylor's confession, must spend the rest of their lives in prison, unless their conduct justifies parole.

Two other men were included in Taylor's confession as being accomplices in the crime. They were John O'Shea and Charles Smith. O'Shea was found not guilty of the crime, following his trial last week. Smith is still at large.

Just what would be done on the robbery indictment against O'Shea, District Attorney Ganong was not prepared to say this morning. He said, however, that nothing definite would be decided in the matter in the immediate future.
