

FLOYD COLLINS IS FOUND DEAD

Examination Made Major M. M. Moss also of Bowling Green, and a medical officer of the same regiment, and Dr. C. C. Howard, Glasgow, representing the Collins family, and Dr. W. H. Hazlett of Chicago, stood at the mouth of the shaft while Dr. Francis was making the examination.

"At 1:30 o'clock," said an official bulletin, "the lateral heading at a distance of 12 1/2 feet from the shaft and measured circularly, broke through into the original cave just below the breakdown. This was found completely closed."

At 3:35 p. m. Captain Francis came to the surface and reported that when he arrived at the heading he found it was impossible for any one but a small man to reach Collins.

Ed Brenner went to Collins' body, felt the pulse, made other examinations under Captain Francis and reported there was no sign of respiration and Captain Francis reported these facts to the officials waiting at the top of the shaft.

SECOND QUOTA OF SERUM HAS REACHED NOME

Dog Team Makes Trip in Face of Making Blizzard, Sunday, Is Wrold

NOME, Alaska, Feb. 15.—Edward Rohn and his dogs arrived here at noon today in a blizzard with diphtheria anti-toxin. Crossing Norton Sound two of his dogs fell into a fissure of the ice.

The round trip of Rohn, who left here at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning and drove to Golovin, 85 miles eastward, departing from Golovin on his return at 7:30, battling storm both ways, was rated high here by mushers (men who travel by driving dogs drawing sleds). He tried to drive on to Elim, 15 miles beyond Golovin, but turned back in the face of a storm.

Volunteer Aids From Elim to Golovin, a volunteer, Julius Kaigak, brought the serum with a dog team.

This anti-toxin was the second shipment received here—both coming by relays of dog teams from Nenana, 879 miles east, on the Alaska railroad—since an epidemic of diphtheria that has taken six lives struck Nome the middle of January. This epidemic has been reported under control, though two new cases appeared last week, and quarantine is to be lifted Friday and the schools opened February 23.

Treacherous Journey Norton Sound, an arm of Bering sea, on whose northern margin Nome lies, and on whose surface the dog team trail from Fairbanks down the Tanana and Yukon valleys and overland from Nome runs for 100 miles on the ice is reputed as one of the most treacherous pieces of sea in the Alaskan territory. The atmosphere cleared while Rohn and his dogs were battling their way through storm on the frozen sea. He suddenly saw miles of open water ahead. One of the two dogs that slipped into the fissure was Star, understudy to Rohn's lead dog. When Rohn had hauled the dogs from the water he found one of Star's legs so badly hurt that he carried the dog the rest of the journey on the sled. The regular leader, half blinded by the snow and wind, clung steadily to his task.

Uncertain weather conditions have led the local bureau of reclamation to defer construction work on two projects until March 1 and later than that, if the alternate freezing and thawing does not stop, Herbert D. Nowell, project manager said today. County roads leading to the different projects are in poor condition and the soil is saturated with moisture.

Work will first be started in the Tule Lake district, a continuation of the excavation of drainage ditches and laterals. Later on, work will be started on the Gerber Dam project which was practically completed last fall.

ROBBERY TRIAL STARTS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.—Norman Selby, formerly known to the prize ring as Kid McKoy, faced trial in superior court here today on three charges of assault with intent to commit murder and five of robbery.

Who bought the Brooklyn Bridge Today?

Almost every day the Brooklyn Bridge is sold to some guillible visitor to New York. Every day someone is swindled. Selling the famous old bridge has become a national joke. Suppose, however, the City of New York decided really to sell the Brooklyn Bridge—to give the buyer the privilege of placing a toll on all who crossed it. They would advertise it for sale. And the prospective purchaser would know the offer to be genuine.

He would know that the paper would not accept the advertisement if it were intended to defraud. He would know that the advertiser would not dare advertise unless his offer were honest.

The advertisement would give the world confidence in the enterprise.

Just the advertising of all merchandise gives the world confidence in that merchandise. Only honest products can tell their stories where all may read.

That is why it pays to read advertisements. You can rely on advertised goods. You know that a worthy manufacturer stands back of them. They are a guide to better buying. They teach you to spend wisely—economically—and with the knowledge that you are buying merchandise which is minus all vain regrets or misrepresented values.

Read the advertisements every day.

Advertising is a bridge—spanning the river of doubtful values—to the shore of worthy merchandise
