League of Nations Seeks Better Physical Training

GENEVA, Feb. 27.—Coordinating the national battles against disease and delivering sledge hammer blows against those maladies which still seem to defy medical skill, will constitute the essence of the future program of the League of Nations in its public health activities. The league's health section has just closed a successful year. It has extended its sphere of action, improved, completed and defined its technical equipment and has carried out with increasing success its special task, that of giving effective help to the various nations administrations in their campaign against epidemics and their attempts to improve public health. In the coming year special attention will be given to instruction in health and social medicine in Europe, America and Japan, together with the development and extension of physical training, with the object of securing the general adoption of rational methods of physical education.
