MEN'S AND WOMEN'S BRAINS

The time honored question as to the respective mental ability of men and women may never be settled to the satisfaction of disputants on either side. But scientific investigations made in recent years seem to hint that the sexes are very nearly equal in mentality.

As a result of careful tests given at Colorado college to 115 men and 111 women, it was found that each group scored an average of exactly 142 points. A combined study of the student bodies of several western universities shows that the percentage of students getting "A" and "B" grades through a long period was 75.4 for men and 75.2 for women. Men students at Harvard university and women students at Radcliffe college have been given exactly the same tests in recent investigations, and it has been found that the men averaged a score of 50.5 while the women averaged 55. A man and a woman tied for first place.

Another investigator says that, taking male and female students all the way from kindergarten through college, there rarely appears any appreciable difference in their capabilities and performance.

These investigations are somewhat reinforced by the fact that women are engaging successfully in a wider range of activities every year. The United States census bureau reports that the number of women chemists and metallurgists has more than trebled in 10 years. As executives, as lawyers and judges, as bank officials, in manufacturing enterprises, as doctors and clergymen, as chauffeurs and so on, women are tackling jobs which formerly lay outside their range of capability.

Wouldn't it be a good idea if men and women stopped arguing about who has the better brain and greater "practical" ability, and as human beings all set about doing the things that interest them most and which they can do best regardless of old-fashioned notions and prejudices?

HUNT'S WASHINGTON LETTER

By HARRY B. HUNT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28. — Congress is always ready to resent any mention of "pull in politics."

Congressional intercession in behalf of certain causes or individuals, it is always insisted, is merely to get attention to the "merits" of the case.

Any "pull" or "influence," in the sense of striving to land special favors for special persons or interests move members to hot and indignant denial.

And yet, to the man outside looking in, there always seems to be a great mass of measures more or less tinged by the personal interests of members or of certain of their constituents.

The bias, if bias there be in these cases, may be entirely subconscious.

But to outsiders, the effect of personal favor in the advancing of many measures makes the opinion inescapable that "pull" rather than merit decides many matters.

A case in point is that just disclosed in a report by the Senate committee on pensions.

Because of the clear-cut factors in this case, it illustrates the situation more effectively than could pages of exposition.

Two applications came before the committee for increase in pensions.

Mrs. Edith L. Quick, St. Louis, Mo., widow of a veteran of the Spanish-American and World wars, sought an increase from $12 to $50 per month.

George Curry, El Paso, Texas, veteran of the Spanish-American War, sought an increase of from $12 to $50 a month.

The committee recommended the increase sought by Mrs. Quick be denied. It recommended the increase asked by Curry be granted.

"Mrs. Quick," the report stated, "is now drawing compensation at the rate of $30 per month as a World war widow, and is only 44 years old."

Of Curry, the report said: "He is now physically unable to earn his living by manual labor."

On the face of the report, the recommendations seem entirely fair. The report says Mrs. Quick "is only 44 years old," suggesting she should be able to supplement her pension by personal employment.

It does not state she suffers from an ailment which prevents her from working and that she has no child or other relative to contribute to her support.

The report says of Curry that "he is now physically unable to earn his living by manual labor."

It does not state that Curry is now on the government pay roll at $500 a year as the United States commissioner on the Mexican boundary commission.

Curry has never had to earn his living by manual labor. But he has held many political jobs, including that of high sheriff of Manila, governor of New Mexico and member of Congress from that state.

Curry at one time served as private secretary to Senator Bursum of New Mexico. Bursum obtained for Curry his appointment as boundary commissioner. And Bursum is now chairman of the Senate pension committee.

Lumber

Perhaps the greatest single industry that has contributed so much to the growth of Klamath Falls, and Klamath County, is Lumbering. From early spring until late in the fall, men in the woods are felling trees and transporting them to the local mills where they are cut.

Last year, it is estimated, with twenty-eight mills operating in the County, a total of 339,000,000 feet of pine lumber was cut. There is 30,000,000 feet of standing timber tributary to Klamath Falls. This will insure manufacturing here for many years. The payroll from the lumber industry is approximately $1,000,000 per month when all mills are in operation.
