Uncensored Observations

Another question that the secretary to the secretary of the chamber of commerce had to answer today—Do you grow horseradish in Klamath Falls in commercial quantities? Just about everything else but! And during the day, another letter came from the wilds of California informing the secretary that he was a saw filer and could do cross cut work and wanted a job badly. They must think that Klamath Falls is not only a diversified country but versatile as well. Remember once last winter, when they asked the secretary if they grew cotton here? Better send some of our Moonshine recipes out for a substitute.

To testify to the widespread abilities of the Uncensored Observations, Will Brown, who issued a call for someone to sign his marriage license in last night's paper, is being swamped with proposals and positively deluged with marriageable women's offers. According to "Brownie," he is going to change his place of residence to parts unknown so that he can escape from this exodus of feminine wiles and charms.

EVENING HERALD IS AGAIN NAMED OFFICIAL PAPER

County Court Chooses Publication as Official Organ on Circulation Ground

Held to be the most substantial and trustworthy medium, both as to circulation and service, the Evening Herald was chosen as the official newspaper of Klamath county by the county court in session yesterday afternoon.

For the ensuing year, as in years past, all notices, accounts of the proceedings of the county court and other business involving county business, will be published exclusively in the columns of the Evening Herald. The evening publication continues to be the official organ of the county.

The grant of the county printing contract was made principally upon the circulation of the Evening Herald. The law holds that the newspaper which by its bona fide circulation can reach the homes of the most people in the county, should be granted the contract for county printing.

TO TAKE THREE MILLION TROUT OUT OF STREAM

Work of Propagation on Spencer Creek Under Way, Says Warden

Egg taking operations on Spencer creek are now in full swing, according to Deputy Game Warden Phil Motchenbacher who returned last night from the creek where he is in charge of the work of artificial propagation of trout.

"It looks to me like we will get about three and a half million eyed eggs this year," Mr. Motchenbacher said yesterday afternoon. "The trout are running fairly heavy now and will be running in even greater quantities in several weeks."

The game warden is being assisted at Spencer creek by two helpers. If expectations are justified, nine million small trout will be hatched at Diamond Lake hatchery this year, Mr. Motchenbacher said. The game warden hopes to hold the average loss in artificial propagation of trout, down to 30 per cent, which is normal. The loss in natural propagation is considered to be about 95 per cent.

CONGO AND WILSON PLEAD GUILTY AND RECEIVE SENTENCES

Leslie Congo, notorious Klamath bootlegger, and his aide, Tom Wilson, each pleaded guilty to possession of intoxicating liquor and were given their sentences yesterday afternoon and today by magistrates sitting in judgment in the two cases.

Congo entered a plea before Justice of the Peace J. O. Hamaker of Bonanza and was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail and fined $500. Wilson was fined $200 and costs by Justice of the Peace R. E. Hunsaker when he entered a plea of guilty this afternoon.

Mrs. Leslie Congo, who is charged with possession of intoxicating liquor, will be tried next Monday morning before Justice of the Peace Hunsaker.

Coyote With Rabies Bites Yreka People

(Special to The Herald)
YREKA, Cal., March 4.—Unless ranchers, Indians and other owners of miscellaneous and hungry dogs in Shasta county get rid of the animals within a limited time a quarantine on dogs will be sought by Dr. Charles Pius, county health officer. The pronouncement by the physician came as the climax to the attack by a mad coyote on Mrs. Arthur P. William and John Sissel of Gazelle.

The coyote, virulent with rabies, bit Sissel about the legs and later jumped to the back of a horse on which Mrs. Williams was riding and bit her severely about the hands before she choked the animal unconscious and it was later beaten to death with a club.

The injured people were taken to Weed, where the Pasteur treatment is being administered. The ban on dogs is to anticipate an outbreak of rabies with the coming of warm weather.

HALT PROBE OF DEATH OF GIRL

Denver Officials Trying to Find How Child-Woman Was Killed

DENVER, March 4.—Official investigation into the death of Hazel Blazer, 32 years old, whom disease had stunted and stifled so that she was like an infant in mind and physical strength, has halted momentarily with a delay in the findings of the autopsy, which were to point out the way in which the "child-woman" met her death.

The inquest was adjourned yesterday until Thursday morning by Coroner J. J. Mackin of Englewood, a suburb, where the tragedy occurred, when Dr. W. L. Dennis, Denver pathologist, announced that the pathological examination of the body was not completed.

Meanwhile the victim's father, Dr. Harold E. Blazer, 61, physician and inventor, who was charged yesterday with first degree murder, remains in the Littleton hospital in a serious condition as the result of his three attempts to kill himself.

Dead Cattle in Harriman Creek Bring Protests

Carcasses of dead cattle and horses at the mouth of Harriman creek, Rocky Point, have aroused the fear of forest rangers that if the dead animals are allowed to remain in the creek that the water will be polluted to the detriment of scores of local people who depend on Rocky Point for their spring and summer holiday resort.

With the intention of informing county health authorities of the existing situation, Forest Ranger Rogers of the Crater National forest, arrived in Klamath Falls yesterday afternoon.

"There are 24 carcasses of dead steers and six or seven carcasses of dead horses," Mr. Rogers said. "Late last fall, when desert cattle were driven into the Rocky Point country, many of the cattle were so eager for water that they drowned themselves in the creek. They were pulled out of the water and left on the bank but the water has raised and swept them back into the water again."

"Summer visitors, owning cottages along Pelican Bay depend upon this water, and to protect them and also Rocky Point, I feel that something should be done about it."

Mr. Rogers journeyed on to Medford last night and will report the situation to his superiors.

Cloudy Weather Marks Simple Ceremony for President and Aide

Washington Gay with Color and Distinguished Visitors as Oaths of Office Are Given—Parade Is Brilliant Feature of the Day's Programme

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Coolidge was inaugurated in his own right today by overwhelming mandate of the people.

For the first time in 19 months the country has a vice president.

Standing at the historic spot where a long line of predecessors have taken the sacred oath, President Coolidge bent and kissed the Bible in the hands of Chief Justice Taft and delivered his inaugural address.

Vice President Dawes a few minutes earlier had taken his oath and delivered his inaugural address in the senate chamber.

The president took the oath of office precisely at 1 o'clock. Vice President Dawes had taken the oath at 12:14 o'clock.

Despite the president's firm stand for a lack of expensive display, which had reduced the ceremony to the last degrees of simplicity, it still was a marked contrast from the midnight moment of 19 months ago, when, roused from sleep by the news of President Harding's death, he took the same oath by the glow of an oil lamp in his father's Vermont farm house.

Stands by Father

The president's father, Colonel John Coolidge, stood near him today and gathered close by were Mrs. Coolidge, with her mother, members of the diplomatic corps and members of the congressional committee in charge of the inaugural arrangements.

The March sun, which had promised to flood the ceremonies with a glorious light, was overcast by gathering clouds as the hour of inauguration arrived, and a prospect of a crisp, bright day had slowly turned to a threat of cold rain.

Ranchers Listen in to Coolidge's Inaugural Speech

According to reports received during the day, very few of the ranchers and farmers from the outlying districts were able to receive President Calvin Coolidge's inaugural address given this morning before thousands in Washington D. C. when he took the office of the thirtieth president of the United States of America.

E. L. Paddock who is an ardent radio fan, was probably the only one in the Olney district who received the address clearly and calling several of his friends over the phone let them listen in on the words of the President.

"Scotty", a farm hand who lives with Paddock's, is able to describe the ceremony from the weather to the parade down Pennsylvania avenue. He also recognized Chief Justice Taft's voice, having heard him speak in 1912. The only thing that was rather indistinct was Mr. Coolidge's "I do" which was later announced as being hardly audible to those on the same platform with him. "Scotty" said, that had he known stenography, he could have copied the entire speech.

Paddock's location, which is several miles from power line interference is responsible for the marvelous reception over the radio.

PERSHING ILL

HAVANA, March 4.—General Pershing, who was taken ill yesterday afternoon after he arrived here from Santiago, spent a quiet night and was sleeping at 7:30 a. m. today, it was learned at the hotel where he is stopping.

Firemen Not Called Out For 30 Days

Today dawned bright and clear with no prospects of fires, this making the thirtieth day the Klamath Falls fire department has rested in its rooms, not having an opportunity to bring the engine out once in all that time, not even with a false alarm.

During the month of February, 1924, $550 was the estimated cost of insurance paid from fire calls with three alarms.

During the month of February, 1925, there were two alarms the early part of the month with no loss. Thirty days today since a call was sent to the Klamath Falls fire department to quench someone's carelessness or to save some one's life in a burning building.

Building permits do not come up to the mark set for 1924, which was the highest yet attained in Klamath Falls. February, 1923, issued permits aggregating $2150; February, 1924, permits at $46,310; February, 1925, $36,755.

March started off well with building permits granted by the city council, both for remodeling and erection of new buildings. The city is rapidly growing and old structures on the main street are being torn down to save space for new plans.

UTILITIES TAX BILL APPROVED

Governor Pierce Also Signs Measure for Poultry Control Work

SALEM, Ore., March 4.—Governor Pierce today signed two more of the revenue bills passed by the legislature on recommendation of the legislative committee to aid in relieving the state's financial malady. They were house bills 485 and 502, the former taxing the gross earnings of utilities and the latter requiring self-supporting state activities to pay ten per cent of their receipts into the general fund of the state. The measures are calculated to produce approximately $30,000 and $200,000 for the biennium.

Another bill signed today over which the ways and means committee wrestled through several night sessions was house bill 140, which appropriates $5000 a year, or $10,000 for the biennium for the investigation and control of poultry diseases and the establishment of the office of state poultry veterinarian.

FATHER DEAD; SON IS SOUGHT LOCALLY

Sudden death of William Willis in Los Angeles on March 1 has led to inquiries concerning the presence in this county of a son of the deceased. A wire was received last night by the sheriff's office from the Wilkshire Undertaking company of Los Angeles, seeking information about young Willis. According to the telegram he is working on a ranch close to Klamath Falls.

SALARY INCREASE BILL IS APPROVED

GRAZING FEES SETTLED

REDUCTION OF TAXES SOUGHT

Coolidge in Inaugural Address Says Economy Must Be Watch-Word

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Clothed with a direct mandate from the people, Calvin Coolidge today dedicated himself and his administration to the lightening of the tax burden at home and to the promotion of peace through mutual understanding with the nations of the world.

These two purposes were outlined in high relief by Mr. Coolidge in his inaugural address, delivered from a simply decorated stand at the east entrance of the Capitol just after he had taken his second oath of office as president of the United States.

Era of Prosperity
Dividing his attention almost equally between affairs at home and problems abroad, and between things accomplished and achievements hoped for, Mr. Coolidge spoke with assurance as to the future, declaring that because of action already taken, an era of prosperity lay ahead and a firmer courage and a higher hope inspired the heart of all humanity.

"We have been, and propose to be, more and more American," he declared. "If we have any heritage, it has been that. If we have any destiny, we have found it in that direction."

Accord with this purpose, he asserted, demands the conduct of government along certain definite lines.

These lines in the field of domestic affairs point, first, to the exercise of greater economy in government, and second, to reduction of taxation, he continued. This recent election, he said, had demonstrated that "the policy that stands out with the greatest clearness is that of economy in public expenditure with reduction and reform of taxation."

Favors Economy

"I favor the policy of economy, not because I wish to save money, but because I wish to save people," he continued. "The men and women of this country who toil are the ones who bear the cost of government. Every dollar that we carelessly waste means that their life will be so much the more meager. Every dollar that we prudently save means that their life will be so much more abundant."

The practice of such economy, he declared, has brought the time when there can be further tax reduction and "when, unless we wish to hamper the people in their right to earn a living, we must have tax reform." He declared his opposition to extremely high tax rates because "they produce little or no revenue, because they are bad for the country, and finally, because they are wrong."

"The verdict of the country has been given on this question," he added. "That verdict stands. We shall do well to heed it."

SANDERS SWORN IN
WASHINGTON, March 4.—Everett Sanders of Indiana was sworn in as secretary to President Coolidge this afternoon in the executive offices of the White House.
