

The Screen

At the Liberty

Another film beauty who stood out against the bobbed-hair craze and maintained her "crowning glory" against the triumphant march of the scissors and clippers has fallen! Evelyn Brent has been "hamponized" in a series of the beautiful locks that once were hers. And in addition to losing her hair, she also has lost a bet. That is why she claims there is a trick in it. She would never bob her hair. Since her husband, B. P. Fineman, that wretched never bob her hair. Since then she has been starred in a series of pictures, and the second production, "Silk Stocking Sal," which will be shown at the Liberty theatre tonight required bobbed hair for the heroine.

What type of screen actress would you call Colleen Moore? One would naturally suppose that in the motion picture business, where players are catalogued as certain types and must forever be identified as such, that Colleen Moore would have her classification. But she hasn't. Despite the fact that Mr. So-and-so, who made his first success with a beard, must continue to wear a beard to be successful, and, despite the fact that Miss Whatever-her-name is doomed to play vampire roles, Colleen Moore has risen to the top untraditionally.

Most prominent during the past year or more in comedy she has achieved the reputation as the screen's leading comedienne. In "Flirting With Love," showing at the Liberty theatre, she is portraying a difficult dual personality role, a part calling for both comedy and emotional interpretation.

At the Pine Tree

"Glad" shouted Ernest Torrence when questioned about his feelings on being selected to portray the role of Capt. Hook in the Paramount picture of J. M. Barrie's "Peter Pan." "It is the greatest thing that has ever happened to me in my life. There is nothing in the entire history of the world's literature that I would father play. Glad! I'll tell the world I'm glad!"

Torrence, who is featured with Betty Bronson, Cyril Chadwick, Virginia Brown Faire and Anna May Wong in the production at the Pine Tree today and tomorrow, looks the part of Capt. Hook even without make-up and his attitude toward the Barrie fantasy is, therefore, the more amazing. He has studied the play not only with the mind of a student but with the heart of a man who loves it.

"What a marvelous conception the character of Peter Pan is," he said one day while discussing plans for the picture.

"Every man with the heart of a boy in Peter Pan. In infancy he may not have fallen out of his baby-carriage when the nurse was looking the other way, but at some time in his life he has been a blood brother of the band of lost boys, has had his adventures in the forest of the Never Never Land and has cruised upon its desperate seas. It is easy enough for a boy to find the trail to that wonderful land, most of them can't miss it. The feet of youth skip over it nimbly enough, although there are many stones in the path of the feet of age."

"I am sorry for the man who can't remember his days of hand-to-hand encounters with whiskered pirates of the Spanish Main; who can't remember his desperate battles with the savage redskins, when every clump of bushes was an ambush, when every tree concealed an enemy. What heroes we were—and what

KURDS REPULSED

BUTCHER SHOP BOMBED

BERLIN, Ill., March 10.—H. O. Fowler, father of Glenn Fowler, one of the principals in the recent street riots here, and his wife were injured today by an explosion which tore out a corner of Fowler's butcher shop.

brains we had. The wily Long John Silver schemed against us in vain. We laughed at the nefarious plots of Captain Hook and defeated them. Chief Red Eagle and his band held no terrors for us, so long as we had our trusty rifle. We thwarted them all at every point and how we revelled in the shock of battle and gloated over the mangled bodies of our enemies. The clash of swords, the rattle of musketry and the deep boom of the cannon were music to our ears.

"Those were the good old days!" "Peter Pan", produced by Herbert Brenon, was adapted for the screen by Willis Goldbeck. There's a strong cast playing in support of the principals.

FARM POINTERS

Woody or dead seeds ought not to be planted by the farmers. The seed laboratory at the state college tests seeds free of charge. All seeds ought to be tested before being purchased, as there is no recourse after the seed is purchased unless they are guaranteed. Care must be taken to get a fair sample, getting it from all portions of the sack or bin. Send all samples to the seed laboratory at the state college, Corvallis.

Failure to separate the young cockerels from the pullets is likely to result in stunted pullets, says the Oregon experiment station. If the brooder house is crowded it may be advisable to sell the cockerels at a low price as soon as the sex can be determined. Leghorn cockerels can be recognized at from 3 to 4 weeks old by their heavier combs.

Soon after the foal is born the navel should be painted with iodine, says the Oregon experiment station. The navel should not be tied with a string or handled by the caretaker.

Many peach trees are showing dead buds scattered along the branches, and sometimes numerous dead twigs. These effects are due to peach blight and peach die-back fungus. It is too late to do anything for this year's attack, but almost 100 per cent protection can be obtained in the future, if Bordeaux 4-4-50 is applied thoroughly before the fall rainy season starts. July or August are the best months for this spray. But the diseases are usually held in check where the grower sprays immediately after harvesting, says the state college experiment station. With late varieties of crops this is generally too late for the best results.
