Huge Cannibal Lake Trout Disturbs Peace and Quiet Of Rainbows at Hatchery

Lean, black and swift, a huge mauling rainbow trout has punctured the peaceful quiet life of fat rainbow and Eastern Brook trout that populate the clear pools of Crooked creek at the Klamath hatchery, it was learned today from reports from the hatchery.

Emigrating from Klamath Lake, "where trout are trout," the big cannibal made his first appearance the middle of last week when without warning he charged into the center of a school of smaller trout that were lulled into a sense of security by being protected on the hatchery grounds.

Like the barbarian he was, the tawny scrapper from the lake flashed his way through his more civilized brothers and before the outraged eyes of Deputy Game Warden Jud Short swallowed five healthy trout. Having had his fill the big fellow returned to his haunt down the creek. The next afternoon, just as evening shadows were closing, the cannibal again put in his appearance.

This evening, Short was waiting for him with a rod and a bit of salmon egg on a small hook. Like a shadow the trout passed from pool to pool, gobbling a confident youngster at this point and swallowing the youngster's father at the next.

Finally, while resting on the bottom, Short managed to attract his attention to the bit of salmon egg. The black marauder evidenced some interest but with the craftiness of the lake, carefully investigated. He passed over the bit of egg, flicked it with his tail and smelt it carefully.

Just as the big boy was about to gobble the egg, one of the beautiful but dumb trout that Short was befriending, beat the big fellow to the bait. Twice, three, and four times did this occur, till the deputy game warden gave up in disgust and returned to the hatchery house.

From latest reports the burly cannibal from the lake is still making mince meat out of the civilized inhabitants of the hatchery waters.

Dodge Brothers Not to Change Policies

Indicative of the fact that Dodge Brothers policies are to remain unchanged despite the change in ownership, and that no consolidation with other companies is planned, is the following telegram received here by H. S. Wakefield, local dealer.

The telegram reads as follows: "Dillon, Read & Co. have arranged to purchase Dodge Brothers Incorporated. The new owners have assured the management that the business will be continued as an independent corporation and that rumors of consolidation with other companies are unfounded, that the policies, standards and ideals of the present organization are recognized and approved, that there is no intention of changing them, that the present management and organization will remain as they are."

RODEO WILL BE TAKEN OVER BY THE COUNTY

At a meeting last night of the members of the Bly Rodeo association and a number of Klamath Falls business men, it was decided that the Bly show should be taken over by a county association, in order to properly expand the enterprise and through it attract attention to Klamath Falls and Klamath county.

The date of the rodeo, July 4, was held to be the most opportune time of year for a show of this nature. Requests from different churches of the community that the rodeo be not staged on Sunday, were recognized by the association and the merchants last night when it was decided that the Rodeo would not be held on the Sabbath. A favorable circumstance for the rodeo this year is the proposed Indian convention to be held at Wial-Kee.

A mass meeting for the further consideration of ways and means has been called for 7:30 p. m., April 14, at the chamber of commerce rooms. Committees from Bly, Fort Klamath, Chiloquin, Bonanza, Langell's Valley, Malin, Merrill, and Keno will be present at the meeting, besides the regular association and the business men of Klamath Falls.

The Bly association possesses the best string of outlaw horses in the country, and has always put on an excellent show in past years. The members of the association wish to retain only enough stock in the enterprise to insure their interest and support.

Those present from the Bly Rodeo association last night were J. N. Givan, E. S. Henry, Geo. Boyd, I. C. Edsall, and Marvin Cross. Klamath Falls business men present were Chairman E. W. Vannice, Roy Durbin, Barney Chambers, Joe McDonald, L. P. Sabin, Fen Walte, and J. J. Miller.
