The manufacturers of the Alaska Refrigerators make the following statement:

No insulating material has ever come to our attention during more than 47 years of refrigerator experience that can compare with PEBBLED CORK.

We have made countless tests and experiments with materials of many kinds. But Pebbled Cork has consistently proved its superiority. It is, we believe, the greatest of all non-conductors.

It is the myriad of microscopic air cells confined in cork and found in no other material which invests it with this remarkable power to retard the passage of heat or cold.

Experts know the value of cork in this respect. As evidence of this, the United States government for years has specified cork in refrigerators it buys.

These refrigerators have a small glass window showing you the cork insulation. No guess work. This means BETTER FOOD PROTECTION WITH LESS ICE.

WOMAN ADMITS GIVING POISON TO 4 CHILDREN

Mrs. Anne Cunningham Tells About Killing Children Thru Love

CROWN POINT, Ind., April 16.—Calm and unmovable Mrs. Anna Cunningham, 49, confessed last night that she gave poison to three of the five members of her family whose mysterious deaths within six years led to an investigation, resulting in a murder charge against her.

The victims, Isabelle, 18; Charles 19, and Walter, 13, she said she had killed because she loved them best. She believed she was going to die, she said, and wanted to take them with her to join their father who died in 1918. For the same reason she had given poison to David, the last son, now in a critical condition in a Chicago hospital.

She denied that she had poisoned her husband, the first to die, or Harry, another son, in whose body coroner's chemists found arsenic. She spared Mae, 19, daughter because she disliked her she said.

Also Took Poison

Each time she administered the arsenic in bread and butter she took a similar dose herself and after the death of Walter, she added a teaspoonful of loline, but always recovered. Her desire "to join in heaven" her husband and take with her her best loved children, had prompted her to administer the death poison to Isabelle, the first victim, who died December 21, 1920.

The confession of the woman, who had remained unshaken under the questioning in Chicago of prosecutors Robert E. Crowe and John Sbarbaro who had obtained admissions of guilt from Nathan Leopold, Jr. and Richard Loeb, was obtained by Sheriff Benjamin H. Stroug and Miss Maureen McKernan, Chicago newspaper reporter.

Recovers From Coma

During yesterday after she had recovered from a state of coma into which she had lapsed early Tuesday, Mrs. Cunningham talked to Miss McKernan and admitted that she might have placed some arsenic in the food of David by mistake, but was spelt in denial that she had poisoned any members of her family.

She permitted the reporter to apply cold compresses to her head and loosen her clothing, appearing more interested in changing her best black silk dress for an apron than in her cold blooded recital of the deaths.

Tells Entire Story

Recently she asked that her daughter Mae be sent for and that she be removed from her cell because of the presence there of several woman prisoners. Disregarding the girl's frantic screams to remain silent she detailed her story first to Sheriff Stroug and later to an official court reporter.

The girl refused to remain and listen to the account of the deaths of her brothers, and was taken away. She also declined an offer to remain in the jail near her mother during the night and went to a hotel.

Only when she was asked to sign the transcribed confession at 2:40 a. m. today did Mrs. Cunningham betray any emotion. She broke down and sobbed.
