

CONCERT RAISES LIBRARY FUNDS

Miss Cornelia Marvin Offering Oregon History to Klamath Falls Club

Through the benefit concert given on Friday night, April 17, by the Little Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Harry Borel, the library club was able to raise, with the exception of $7.50, a sufficient sum to pay on the typewriter which it has purchased for the library. The remaining sum of $7.50 will be raised in the near future.

During the recent visit of Miss Cornelia Marvin, state librarian, she suggested that the Klamath Falls library club purchase the set of books of Harvey W. Scott's "Memoirs." The books, six in number, and said by Miss Marvin to be the only authentic history of Oregon now on the market, were compiled by Scott's son, Miss Marvin was able to obtain the last three issues of the first printing for the nominal sum of $25, expecting to receive the larger book appropriation, which the legislature did not grant. Miss Marvin is now offering one set of the books for the same price which she paid for them, to the Klamath Falls library.

STRAMGALIA ROCKS EARL RITCHIE TO SLEEP IN HEAVYWEIGHT MATCH

Rocco Strambo (Stramgalia), veteran of 147 fights, lifted through the defense of Earl Ritchie in the third round and with a right cross that started from the floor knocked Ritchie completely out, at the Scandinavian hall last night.

Outweighed 25 pounds, Rocco outgassed his heavier opponent at every point of the fight. It looked like a contest between David and Goliath, with David the winner.

Ritchie Starts Good
Ritchie started out well. He chased the slippery and clownish Rocco all over the ring, punching, feinting, left jabbing and frequently crossing over with a right to the head or body. Rocco was always hit going away. Whenever he bored in, Ritchie would miss.

The fight was Ritchie's by a shade until shortly after the opening of the second round when the Portland scrapper unleashed a terrific right uppercut to the pit of Ritchie's stomach. It hurt, and so did another hay maker to the solar plexus a minute later, which made the Klamath heavyweight catch his breath and wince.

Sensing his advantage, Rocco sailed in to his opponent, both arms swinging like windmills. He battered Ritchie all over the ring, from corner to corner.

Takes Defensive
Ritchie's confident spirit, manifest in the early rounds of the bout, died away a'borning and he was soon on the defense. The beginning of the third round saw Strambo's attack continue.

The knockout blow, was in reality the result of three punches. The two men were mixing it in the middle of the ring when Strambo knocked Ritchie back on his heels with a right, followed up with a straight left and then with every ounce of power shot a right cross to the point of Ritchie's chin.

Ritchie crumpled up and sank to the floor like a steer that had been slugged on top of the head with a mace. He slipped through the ropes and rolled half off the ring, his head on the lap of Dr. Paul M. Noel. With the aid of his neighbor, the local dentist kept Ritchie from sagging off the ring.

When he was counted out, they had to carry the heavyweight to his corner, where after working on him for some time, he was revived.

Crim vs. Felix

Jack Crim, local middleweight, clearly outpointed Young Felix of Weed. Felix displayed a shifty defense and good footwork, but failed to show anything but a stiff left during the fight. Crim was the aggressor throughout.

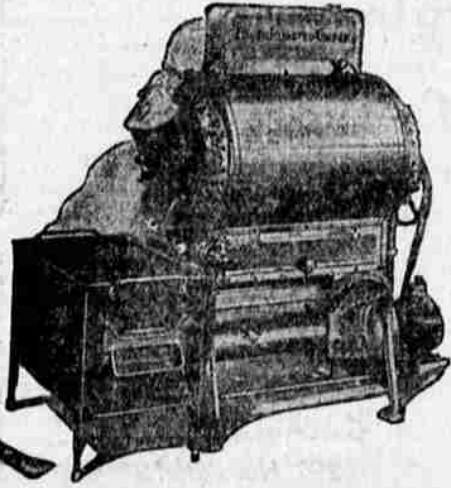

Many did not see the first blow that spelt disaster for Tommy Thompson, 146 lbs., in his fourth round fight with Wilbur Harrington, slugging Indian, 136 lbs. Nor was it surprising, for the blow, a short uppercut, traveled about 12 inches. Thompson went down like he was hit with an ax.

Leading his head, he did not take the full count of nine, but jumped up at the count of one, only to go down again under a flurry of blows driven with pile driver force. Four times Thompson took a nose dive and the blow that sent him down

OWENS VALLEY MEN HERE TO LOOK OVER LANGELL'S VALLEY

If Frank Dearborn and Ad Farrington, two citizens of the famed Owens valley, place their stamp of approval upon the Langell's valley country, the Owens valley community will move to Langell's valley country to make their permanent home.

This was learned last night from Dearborn and Farrington, who, with Sam Head, arrived to inspect the agricultural resources. It is understood that the Rogue River valley country is being strongly advocated by the Oregon land settlement board.

After spending several days in Klamath county the three men will return to southern California and make their final report.
