

Mellow'd

Coffee, Senora—it is like the wine—it must be mellow'd to bring to the taste that rare flavor which only our high mountain plantations can grow.

"Here in our tropic storehouses, for two years, three years, it should repose—before the roaster adds the finishing touch of the artist!

"Indeed no, Senora, all of our coffee is not so mellow'd. It is the misfortune—but so popular the coffee beverage, we can manage to keep here but a little to age and mellow!

"Si,—it costs more. But the particular roaster, he gladly pays the difference. His customers appreciate the delightful, the unusual personality of his roast par excellence!—the old coffee with just a discreet dash of the new to heighten, to emphasize the rare old flavor!

"Then you from the Pacific Coast are indeed fortunate. For you say your S & W is our fine mountain coffee? and from our mellow'd stock, livened with but a very little of the old? Bueno!"

S & W coffee upholds the S & W reputation for quality—otherwise it couldn't bear the S & W label. The world's best coffee, a blend by real artists among experts, roasting and packing by the most modern methods. Comes in the new key-can

"You'll try it? Good! You'll not be disappointed."

CRAPPIES, BASS AND BLUEGILLS TO BE PLANTED IN GERBER DAM

Bluegills, crappies and bass will soon be swimming the waters of the Government Gerber dam reservoir, it developed at the meeting of the Sportsmen's association.

R. J. Kirkwood, secretary of the State Sportsmen's association, president of Multnomah Angler's club, chairman of the game committee at the state legislature last year, and holding other responsible positions on Sportsmen organizations, pointed out to local sportsmen how they could secure the fish for planting in the Gerber dam reservoir, 25 miles east of Bonanza.

Bass Easy To Get

When the flood waters of the Columbia recede, millions of bass minnows are caught in the flood pools, Mr. Kirkwood said. By use of a net, one can scoop up sufficient minnows ready to plant, for the Gerber dam. The state game commission, he said would be glad to cooperate with the sportsmen in securing the fish. Concerning bluegills, a game fish strange to the Native Oregonian, the United States Bureau of Fisheries would be glad to ship several cans of the fish to Klamath Falls for planting in Gerber dam, Mr. Kirkwood said. Crappies could be secured in the same manner as bass. Nate Otterbels was appointed chairman of the fish committee, which will attempt to get the fish shipped into this county in the near future.

Try German Browns

Mr. Kirkwood suggested to the sportsmen that they try the German Brown trout in some of the streams of this county. The species was the hardest of the trout family and capable of living in most unfavorable water conditions, he pointed out. As a lighter it was on a par with the fastest trout that swam and was excellent as a pan fish.

The trout could be secured either through the United States Bureau of Fisheries or by effecting a trade of rainbow trout for Berman Brown trout with some other state.

The long discussed problem of an adequate fish ladder over the Sprague River dam was again reopened by Ed Kendall who reported his observations on a recent visit to the dam. Thousands of trout are unable to get over the Sprague River dam owing to the fact that the fish ladder has been not only damaged by logs but it is also practically useless because of being out of the main current of the stream. Kendall also suggested that pressure be brought to bear upon the Chiloquin Lumber company to construct a fish ladder over the dam at the mill.

Council in Favor

It developed that the Indian tribal council had twice endorsed the construction of a substantial fish ladder over the dam; that if the Chiloquin Lumber company dam was holding up the trout spawning run, the mill operator could be forced to construct an adequate fish ladder over the dam; that all interested parties, including the state, county, the United States Bureau of Fisheries, were agreed on the necessity of another fish ladder over Sprague River.

Over a year ago, according to District Game Warden M. J. Barnes, a party of Game officials, including representatives from the state game commission and the United States Bureau of Fisheries, investigated the dam and then Superintendent of the Klamath Indian Reservation,

Tigers' Pilot

This is Capt. Dyer, bow on the Princeton crew this season. He expects to pilot the Tigers to a most successful campaign on the briny deep. The material at hand is said to be the best in years.

Fred A. Baker, urging that he recommend to the department of interior the proposition of erecting the fish ladder. Since that time, the matter has been allowed to rest, Barnes said. The fish committee of the association were instructed to follow up the problem and do all in their power to promote the project.

Trout To Be Planted

Nate Otterbels, secretary, reminded the association that in a few months one half million Loch Leven trout would be planted in some lake or lakes along the summit of the Cascades. He suggested that sportsmen keep this in mind and come to the next meeting with suggestions as to where the fish should be planted.

During the meeting, Mr. Kirkwood reminded the members of the association, that in cooperation lay strength. He pointed out that the state association of Sportsmen or any other Sportsmen's association would be only too glad to be of help to the local organization in its attempt to secure any definite objective.

"Politicians would listen to us if we represented a personnel of $25,000 or $30,000 in one organization," he said.

McNeely Reports

W. W. McNeely, reported on the meeting last week of the Jackson County Game Protective Association with the state game commission. Mr. McNeely commented on the silence of the members of the game commission when questioned about the political move which would oust all the game officials in the state not sympathetic to the political aspirations of the governor.

AT THE PINE TREE

"Sackcloth and Scarlet" featuring Alice Terry closes at the Pine Tree theatre tonight. It is a story of "the girl who gives vs. the girl who takes." Telling how a fine big-hearted girl assumed the sackcloth of expiation for her irresponsible sister's deeds and how it affected their lives and happiness.

The four acts of vandyville which also closes tonight affords you an opportunity of enjoying one of the best balanced bills of this popular entertainment ever presented to Klamath Falls audiences.

AT THE LIBERTY

How an American engineer masquerading as an Oriental is mistaken through a strange case of resemblance to a Chinese overlord and placed in the powerful position of the mandarin is being dramatically unfolded in the screen version of "Thundergrate" at the Liberty theatre today.

The plot reaches a highly dramatic pitch when the pretty slave-bridge of the real Lord of Thundergrate is brought before him and he

IRATE NEIGHBOR PROPHESES DIRE END FOR GEORGE WALTON

Years ago, a vehement neighbor woman called the curse of the various and numerous gods down upon the head of an innocent, mischievous little boy, known to his parents, and duly christened "George Walton."

In the curse and the prophecy uttered by the irate woman, whose garden had probably been uprooted by George in his search for "fish worms, the lad was coming to no uncertain end, and to George's worried Mamma the lady said that the child would inevitably come to the "gallows."

And her prophecy came true! George Walton grew up! Entered the put and take deal of the real estate agent in Klamath Falls! Last week he spent a week in learned that she is a white girl who has been abducted by the Chinese. He finds, however, a happy way of solving these problems.

Owen Moore plays the role of the masquerading engineer, while Virginia Brown Faire is to be seen as the slave wife.

COLONISTS FAIL TO WORRY DUTCH

THE HAGUE, Holland, Apr. 23.—People in Holland are paying a good deal of attention just now to reports of communists activities in their eastern possessions.

The latest news from the colonies is to the effect that closer supervision has been ordered through-out the East Indian archipelago over all political gatherings, which no young persons under 18 years of age considered a ripe age, p'it'ally, in the tropics.

M. S. DeGraaff, the Dutch minister of colonies, seems, however, to view the position without alarm. In a memorial to the chamber on the colonial budget he deprecated reports that the native masses are discontented and ready to adopt a policy of non-cooperation. Whatever restrictive action has been taken, he explained, was not aimed at the suppression of communism as a creed but solely in the interests of the preservation of law and order.
