EUROPE FAVORS MILITARY TOYS

LONDON, May 8. — Medieval knights in shining armor have taken the place of the little tin soldier which were popular here prior to 1914. After the war, toy soldiers all but disappeared from the shops, not only in England, but in many countries on the continent, particularly Germany and Austria, and in their stead came little farmer boys and other leaded figures of agriculture.

Models of cows and horses, ducks and chickens and farm houses to scale have been displayed quite generally. Hunting scenes, with the huntsmen in bright colors on horses foxes, hedges, ditches and other suggestions of the country have also been on display this spring on a larger scale than heretofore, but the demand of the public for the knights suggestive of the troubledays of the twelfth century indicates, say thetoy dealers, that war playthings are again coming into favor.

We would be afraid to shake hands as much as Coolidge. Half the folks we meet sell us something.

Washington scientist has a way to cure a jag in 30 minutes, which would be wasting liquor.

Ideas are funny little things. They won't work unless you do.
