The Finest Hand-made Clothes
 Without The Dealers Profit?

Then all you have to do is visit my shop, located in the Winter's building, upstairs Suite No. 310, and learn the advantages, both pecuniary and esthetic of possessing a real tailor made suit.

I manufacture your clothes right here, and I can assure you that your appearance will be greatly enhanced in a suit that is made for you and you alone, by a master craftsman.

You won't see another man wearing identically the same suit, because I won't duplicate without the customers consent.

Let me show you my exclusive collection of imported British fabrics, that are obtainable in this town only through me.

 PRIZES GIVEN

Final decision as to the awards for the prize essay contest for the Stop Forest Fires campaign entered by Klamath county high school students was made this morning and awards given to Glenn Ferguson of Fort Klamath high school, first; Joyce Bennett of Klamath county high school, second; Margaret Cummings, Klamath county high school, third. Prizes given were $5, $3 and $2.

Judges for the contest were Fred Peterson, county school superintendent, W. E. Lamm and Lynn P. Sabin, secretary of the chamber of commerce. Awards were made by the Stop Forest Fires association of Klamath county.

Glenn Ferguson used as his subject, "Why is Klamath County Interested in Forest Protection?" Miss Bennett stressed the subject of "Forest Fire Prevention. The third prize winner, Miss Cummings carried out the thought of "Why Klamath County Should be Interested in Forest Fire Prevention."

The winning essay follows:
 "Lodgepole pine, yellow pine, sugar pine, white pine, douglas fir, white fir, incense cedar, huckleberry bush, grease wood, and western chinquapin. When the above names are mentioned what does one think of? It is only natural that the person should think of the "great outdoors." With its beautiful mountains, divided by beautiful valleys, which are carpeted with lush, green, grass. Its clear pool streams winding in and out as they make their way down the ravines to water the grass below. Its "lusty trout" darting here and there with their backs sparkling in the sunlight. Its deer, elk, bear, and grouse, browsing on the green vegetation that covers the hillsides. This is Klamath county as it is today.

"Almost all of the vegetation grown on our mountain slopes is of some economic value. The lodgepole pine is used for fuel, telephone and telegraph poles; the yellow pine for lumber and shade; sugar pine for fuel; white pine when planed makes white, soft, lumber; douglas fir makes two grades of lumber, "red fir" and "white fir"; white fir is also used for lumber; incense cedar is used for cedar chests, fence posts, and shingles; the huckleberry bushes furnish food for wild life, especially bear and birds; sheep browse on grease wood; and western chinquapin furnishes food for elk and deer.

"If there were no forests in Klamath county; there would be no irrigation in Klamath county; there would be no electric power plant located at the lower end of Klamath Lake; there would be no fishing or hunting, because there would be no hiding places; there would be no lush, green grass for the cattle to graze upon; there would be no Crater Lake National Park; people would not come to see vast areas of blackened, charred, ruins.

"The mountains in northern Klamath county form a horse-shoe around Wood river valley, below this valley, Klamath Lake extends its blue waters thirty-six miles southward where it is used for irrigation. This lake is filled by rivers which come from the mountain slopes. These mountain slopes are covered with a heavy growth of timber, which acts as a natural reservoir, holding the water back and letting it seep out gradually. Without this natural reservoir the rivers would overflow in the spring, and almost dry up in the summer, but with this natural reservoir the rivers flow even all the time.

"Mr. F. A. Elliot, state forester, states, "that sixty-five per cent of the entire industrial payroll in Oregon comes from the forests; and that forest products are necessary in maintaining our present plane of civilization." There are twenty-nine sawmills, planing mills, and remanufacturing plants depending on Klamath county's forests for raw material. If the forests were to disappear, thousands of laborers would lose their jobs.

"The farmers and ranchers depend upon the lumbering camps and mills for a market for their hay, grain, cattle, sheep, hogs, and milk. The lumber industry caused railroads to be built, and the railroads are still dependent upon the lumber industry. Sportsmen depend on the forests for a game refuge. If there were no forests there would be nothing for the wild to feed upon or to go to for protection. There would be nothing for tourists to see if they were not here.

"Most of the forest land in Klamath county is in the mountainous regions, where the land would be worthless if there were no timber. Mr. C. H. MacDaniels, forest supervisor, states, "Average fir land will raise five hundred feet to the acre in a year. Douglas fir is very plenti-

EUGENE MAN HELD

PORTLAND, Ore., May 16.—E. E. Pinkham of Eugene, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving by a motorcycle policeman who charged his auto hit and injured Timothy A. Ahern, as the latter was alighting from a street car here late yesterday. Hospital attendants said Ahern had a badly bruised hip.

PAINTERS ON STRIKE

PORTLAND, May 16. — Union painters here went on strike today when the Master painters' association refused an increase from $9 to $9 a day and a five day week of 40 hours. Union officials declined to estimate how many men went out. Employers set the probable number quitting at 300.
