THE STRAHORN TERMINAL FUND

The time has come when there should be an accounting of the stewardship of the trustees who have been handling the fund for the terminal site that was demanded by Mr. Strahorn as part of the consideration for his coming here and building a railroad to Bend. Since that fund was started no report has been made and not one contributor with whom we have come in contact has been able to tell us what was done with the money.

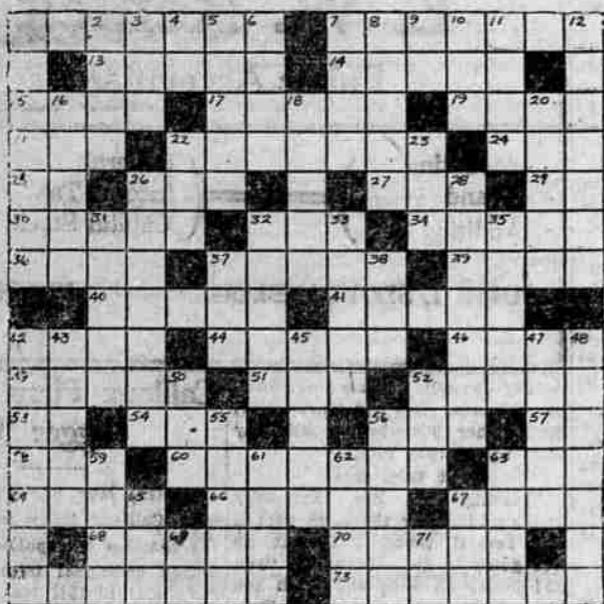

It is our understanding that this site was purchased on the written promise on the part of Mr. Strahorn he would do certain things that he has failed to do. If this is correct, then the trustees should sell the property and return to the donors the money contributed by them.

So far as the Herald is concerned, it is not going to quietly submit to the turning over of this property to the Southern Pacific. Neither is it going to be a silent party to the use of this property as a stumbling block to the entrance of other railroads into Klamath Falls. The people of this city handed over to Mr. Strahorn $300,000 in cash and raised most of the money invested in what was to be a terminal site for railroads, not to have it turned over to the Southern Pacific, but to be used for the creation of an agency through which competing lines were to be brought to this city. Since that object is now defeated through the deal consummated between the Southern Pacific company and Mr. Strahorn, the people want their money back and they are not going to stop demanding it until that result is accomplished.

Let us have an accounting of the Terminal Fund.

Stewart's Daily Letter

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Prohibitionists are none too well pleased at the refusal of General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury, especially in charge of dry enforcement, to permit any reference to the eighteenth amendment or Volsteadism in the poster campaign to be launched July 1, throughout the country.

That is to say, the poster slogans and pictures must boost for law observance in general, they mustn't concentrate on any one law in particular.

The prohibition view is that this will take all the "punch" out of the posters. In other words, the drys doubt if a reproduction of the national capitol, with the words, "In disregard for law lies the greatest danger to the republic," will touch the average American's conscience as it would be touched by the scroll, "Demand creates supply," underneath a picture of a bootlegger delivering a bottle of hooch to a customer.

Another complaint is that Andrews' ruling proves him a supporter of prohibition because it's the law, not necessarily because it's prohibition. He may not even believe it's a good law, the drys argue, though
