Buddy Poppies Will Be Sold Memorial Day

American Legion to Boost for Disabled Veterans May 30

Klamath Falls will dispose of more than twice the number of Flanders poppies generally sold here on Memorial day, according to William Canton, who, with Fen Waite, is in charge of the disposition of the memorial flowers for Memorial day, Saturday, May 30.

Girls of the Tri B club will dispense the flowers on the streets of the city and several merchants have offered space in front of their stores and in the aisles where booths may be placed for the sale of the flowers. More than 15 girls will participate in the sale.

Scores of disabled and needy ex-service men, crippled heroes of Chemin des Dames and the Argonne, Chateau Thierry and Verdun have been busily working in various cities throughout the United States, making the thousands of Buddy Poppies for the annual National Poppy sale of the Veterans of Foreign Wars during the week of Memorial day.

The majority of poppies for the national sale were made in Boston, where in a specially equipped Veterans of Foreign Wars poppy factory and in U. S. Veterans' hospital No. 44 a force of veterans are actively adding hundreds of poppies daily to the 2,500,000 quota they have set for themselves. In many states, however, poppies for the local sale are being made within the state by the state's own war veteran sons.

The Buddy Poppy label, which is on every flower, has been formally registered by the Veterans of Foreign Wars to prevent any infringement upon it and to guarantee to the public the actual manufacture of the poppies by disabled and needy ex-service men. "Buddy Poppy" is the name the men themselves selected for the flower. The entire proceeds of the sale are used for relief work.

Almost all the disabled poppy makers are unable to be rehabilitated by the Veterans' Bureau because their disability was not contemplated by the war risk and vocational training laws when passed and are designated as "non-feasible." To these men in particular the poppy making offers a means of livelihood which the majority, because of their crippled condition, would be helpless to earn in their former occupations, and also helps to renew their self-confidence and rebuild their morale.

FARM POINTERS

CHICK MITES TROUBLES

When mites appear after chicks are in the brooder house, H. E. Cooby, poultry specialist for the O. A. C. extension service, suggests that the ceiling and walls be swept and sand and litter removed. A mixture of crank case oil and a little kerosene applied with a brush to walls, ceiling and floor is recommended, making sure to get the oil into all the cracks. Going over the surface again with a dry rag, mop is advisable in order to remove surplus oil and dampness. New sand, new cut litter and plenty of ventilation complete the cleansing operation and the chicks may then be allowed to return to the warmth of the brooder. The problem is sometimes serious if the chicks cannot be put outside for a while.

CURING GOOD HAY FACTOR

Successful hay curing in Oregon depends on getting the surplus moisture dried out rapidly with the least loss of leaves and fine parts. Putting hay while it has plenty of green leaf surface and nutrition in the plant is recommended by the experiment station. Over ripe hay with the seed fully formed and ripened has a large loss of leaves which materially lessens its feeding value. The palatability is decreased and the market price lowered. The experiment station is cooperating with the United States department of agriculture in the development of new hay grades.

Celery leaf spot in Oregon is easily controlled by systematic spraying with Bordeaux 4-4-50 or by dusting with copper-lime dust, even before the plants are taken from the green house. Spraying or dusting, at regular intervals throughout the growing season is recommended by the experiment station. Serious damage to the celery results in leaf spot.

How busy isn't as important as why busy. The bee is congratulated. Mosquitoes are swatted.

Opions up to $4 a crate will hurt the chewing gum business.

A. M. Collier Makes Appointments Today

Appointment was made this noon at the chamber of commerce board of directors' meeting by A. M. Collier, president of the chamber of commerce, of the finance and budget committee and the committee that will outline the program of the chamber for the ensuing year.

J. A. Gordon, president of the First National bank, was appointed chairman of the finance and budget committee, with Arthur Wilson and M. P. Evans as the other two members.

The work program committee was announced as Dr. G. A. Mansey, R. C. Grossbeck, R. E. DeWesse, M. P. Evans, P. O. Landry and Geo. R. Lindley.

Husband Shot by Wife After Bitter Quarrel

Argument Over Custody of Daughter Brings Tragedy

EL PASO, Texas, May 26.—The wife of a man who followed him from Los Angeles to El Paso and yesterday shot him, perhaps fatally, in a crowded court room, is being held by authorities here today pending the outcome of her husband's wound.

Mrs. C. R. Jones, slender, pretty blonde, was desperate to gain possession of her five-year-old daughter, police learned. Her husband had had the child since the couple quarreled in Los Angeles and his resultant departure for El Paso, she said.

In efforts to reach an agreement concerning the child, Jones and his wife came to the local court room and consulted R. B. Redie, assistant county attorney. He lectured them, calling their separation foolish. This appeared to have been effective, following this the couple seemed to talk amicably.

But it was only a few minutes until the court room spectators were shocked by the report of a small-bull-dog revolver, which Mrs. Jones dropped to the floor after shooting her husband through the head. She waited calmly for arrest.

Road To Elk Lake Is Now Passable

BEND, Ore., May 26.—The road into Elk lake is now open to within half a mile of the lake, according to Bend firemen who returned late last night from the lake. Nine members of the Bend department went up Saturday night and shoveled and dynamited the snow along the road for a distance of two and a half miles.

Good fishing was reported by all visiting the lake but so far more than a three mile walk has been necessary to get into the lake.

Trail blazing motorists can get through to Diamond lake next Saturday and enjoy the cream of the early fishing season, according to Phil Motschenbacher, superintendent of the Diamond lake fish hatchery, who arrived in Klamath Falls last night.

On next Friday morning, with the three-ton game commission truck and several hands, Mr. Motschenbacher will start to work clearing away the last few drifts that obstruct auto traffic to Diamond lake. He will take along powder to be used in blasting out the deeper drifts.
