THE LAST FRONTIER

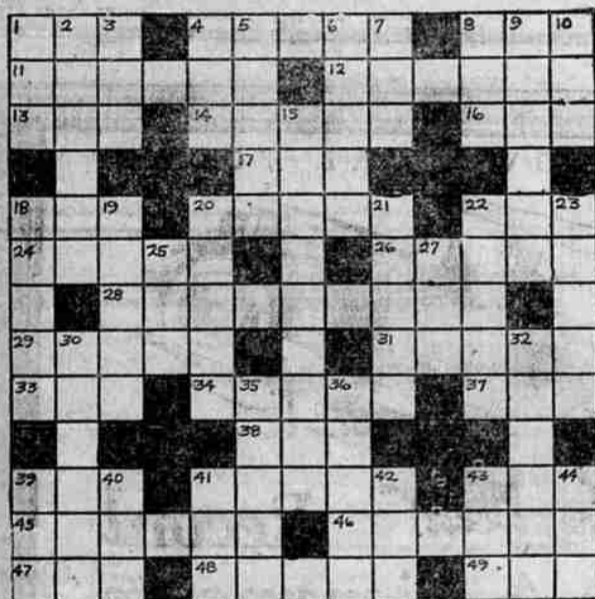

Penetration of a last frontier is promised by the announcement of the Northern Pacific railroad directors of application for authority to extend the Oregon Trunk railway from Bend 150 miles to Klamath Falls.

In Central Oregon 33,000 square miles—one-third of the area of the state—is without railroad facilities. Millions have been spent in unfinished lines which approach this area from all sides. The last connecting links are needed to set in motion a volume of traffic from a vast virgin territory. The Klamath and Lakeview country has enormous quantities of potential trade. Livestock and farm products from the ranges and large irrigated areas added to the lumber from Klamath pine forests justify rail construction.

There is a railroad activity in Oregon. This state made the largest gain in railroad mileage of any state in the Union during the period from June 20, 1916 to December 31, 1923, according to the "Railway Age". Opening up of the Central Oregon territory to the influence and opportunities offered by rail service is a worthy goal for future development.

The vision of pioneer empire builders who pushed back frontiers promises to be fulfilled—Oregon Business.

SCOUT LEADER NAMED

WALLA WALLA, May 26.—E. R. Parkinson, Aberdeen, Wash., was last night chosen executive of the Blue Mountain council of boy scouts, comprising 37 troops in this valley and in Umatilla county, Ore. Mr. Parkinson succeeds A. Dan Dayton who recently accepted a similar position at Butte, Mont.

WILSON ORDERED TO FEDERAL PEN

to the judges, has sent in a petition, and now he comes and after pleading guilty says he is not.

"The court will have to take the plea and pronounce a sentence that in its opinion is commensurate with the crime, therefore, the judgment of the court is that the defendant be confined in the penitentiary at McNellis Island for a term of 18 months."

Wilson Is Silent

As the judge spoke, Wilson stood erect and the color in his cheeks did not change. Deputy U. S. Marshal Arthur Johnson quietly told Wilson that he could chat with his family in the marshal's office.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Joseph Stearns presented the case as fully as though presenting it to a jury.

"I wish to make a complete statement of this case, your honor," he began, speaking slowly and low, as if wishing to spare the prisoner's family as much of the details as possible, "because since the defendant entered his plea of guilty he has been around telling people that he was innocent, that he had to plead guilty because he had no money to secure witnesses and the government was forcing him to trial."

"He caused to be printed a long statement from Roseburg News-Review in which he made declaration of innocence that he had talked about."

Tells of Courtship

Stearns then read the article. Stearns told of Wilson's courtship with Alecia Lindsley, a divorcee. A photograph showing the two together at Reno was shown the court. A love letter that Wilson was alleged to have written the woman after having attended church in Pendleton was read.

A large bundle of letters Wilson is said to have written her was displayed, as well as many telegrams. Stearns told of Wilson's having been entertained in the home of the woman's mother in New York and sister in Pittsfield.

He was kept from getting a marriage license in Gotham, said Stearns, because the New York law requires that one show proof of divorce five days before a license will be issued a divorcee. Wilson claimed that he was divorced.

Story of Trip

"They went to Alexandria, Va., where they went through a marriage ceremony, Miss Lindsley believing Wilson was legally free to marry her. The minister who performed the ceremony was brought to Portland as a witness and identified both parties here," Stearns continued. The trips the two made as man and wife to New York, Pittsfield, Chicago, Minneapolis and Portland were recounted, and pages from hotel registers shown. They lived for a time here at the Congress hotel," said Stearns, "and then took housekeeping apartments at the Sovereign."

"During this time Wilson made numerous trips out of town, telling Miss Lindsley that he had to go on business," continued the deputy district attorney. "It has since been discovered that he visited his wife and children in Roseburg during this time."

Poses as Husband

"One day Miss Lindsley went into a downtown tea room for lunch. She was seated at a table alone. In a few minutes another woman sat at the table, and noting Miss Lindsley looked tired, spoke about it. The conversation continued and Miss Lindsley asked the woman where she was from."

"Roseburg" was the reply.

"Well, then you must know my husband, he lived there many years?"

"Who is your husband?"

"Horace Greeley Wilson."

Stearns told of a gasp of surprise and the statement that there must be some mistake. "Why, you surely are mistaken," the stranger is said to have declared. "Mr. Wilson has a wife only a day or so ago and Mr. Wilson was there at the time. He seemed very happy with his wife and children."

It was some time before Miss Lindsley recovered from the shock, said Stearns. When she did she did she wired Wilson at Roseburg to come back at once. He did. When he was confronted with the startling news, he is said to have replied: "Oh, you are simply overwrought now. When you calm down I can explain everything."

Called Blackmailer

But when the woman calmed down, continued Stearns, she went to friends in Los Angeles, later going to her mother's home. Wilson wrote letters, said Stearns, in which he told Miss Lindsley that his "former" wife was trying to annul the divorce and he was simply arranging this case.

Later it was stated, the Alexandria "wife" learned Wilson was living in Long Beach, Calif. She went there and confronted him in the presence of his wife, telling the story of the Reno romance.

"This woman is a blackmailer. I never saw her before in all my life," Wilson was alleged by Stearns to have told his wife.

The story was told to government officers with the result that Wilson was indicted on five counts charged with violation of the Mann white slave act. "The government agrees to have the five counts in the indictment passed as one," said Stearns.

big mate, J. E. Cooper, who was also fired from the police force last week did not make any verbal statement before the council. He indicated in his communication to the council, that he would make charges against the police department and the inside of the cause of Mayor Goddard in firing him.

Auto Dealers Scrap

The trade rivalry of used car dealers was brought into the council chambers last night by L. O. Arens and Louis Hoaglund.

Arens representing a group of local dealers asked the council to enforce an ordinance which he said was passed several years ago, and which protected local auto dealers against the importation of used cars from outside sections. He cited Hoaglund as being the principal offender in this respect.

But Hoaglund followed Arens and retaliated forcefully. The controversy raged on before a quiet and philosophical council until it appeared that the two men had said all there was to say and a little more, too. Then Mayor Goddard without asking for any comment by the council moved the council onto other business.

Fire Limits Changed

Construction of the First Christian church with stucco material was made possible last night by passage of an ordinance which placed Ninth and Pine street out of the fire limits and enabled the church to start construction without fear of disobeying city building regulations. The construction of the church has been held up for several months pending action of the council on the matter.

man on the jury, a member of the first panel of four, the only jurors thus far sworn in, broke the panel today when he confided to the court in the presence of the defendant Shepherd, and attorneys in the case that he had an opinion in the case and was opposed to capital punishment.

When examined for jury service, Pillar had not said he was not subscribed to capital punishment, but apparently conscientious scruples led him overnight to divulge his belief. He first spoke to a bailiff and then was called into chambers by Judge Lynch, who also summoned the defendant and counseled.

Pillar said he had reached an opinion and wanted to inform the court that he could not believe in capital punishment. He then was discharged, leaving only three jurors in the box.

Alleged Tampering

The second high point was recorded when Attorney Stewart appealed to Judge Lynch to call a halt on State's Attorney Crowe's jury tampering inquiry. Stewart asserted that every day the newspapers were coming out in bold headlines referring to the tampering charges and that if this continued it would be virtually impossible to obtain a jury. He asserted that Judge Crowe was conducting a newspaper campaign as an aid to his political ambitions.

State's Attorney Crowe said that he had certain information that made it necessary, in his opinion, that the tampering provision should be completed before a jury should be sworn into service.

Judge Lynch, however, agreed with State's Attorney Crowe that the court was not being interfered with by the action of the state's attorney's men in questioning veniremen, who had been excused from jury service, in an attempt to learn whether any one had sought to influence him.

Copco Employee Is Saved From Injury By Fellow Worker

Vernon Keesee, 24, living at 324 South Ninth street, was knocked unconscious shortly before noon today when he came in contact with a live voltage wire while employed by the California Oregon Power company in installing an electric range circuit at the home of C. E. Stuckey, East and Canby streets.

The accident occurred when his foot accidentally touched a wire carrying 220 volts and formed a circuit with the steel pliers which he held in his hand.

An ambulance and physicians were called, but by the time they had arrived, he had regained consciousness. He was under the care of a physician for a short time. He was not seriously hurt and is expected to be back at his work again tomorrow.

Keesee was saved by a fellow worker, Carl Sandel. Instructed in Schaeffer method of resuscitation Sandel knew just what to do when the emergency arose. Ten minutes after the accident, Keesee had recovered. Coincidence of the accident was that just last night Copco employees received a lesson in the Schaeffer method of resuscitation.

Wool Will Be Exported From City Thursday

First of Larger Shipments to Move Eastward

First shipments of the wool contracted by big Boston, Mass., buyers will move from Klamath for their destination in Boston Thursday. It was announced today.

Charles F. DeLap, who for several years has been the representative of — Kosland & Co., of Boston, will ship the first consignment of 400,000 pounds of wool on Thursday. All of this wool was sold at from 33 1-2 cents a pound to 44 cents. The price on wool this year has proven to be exceptionally low, according to reports.

Elsman & Co., the other big Boston wool buyers who have bought wool from Klamath sheep men for many years, has contracted for approximately 400,000 pounds of wool.

Wool from Lake county, Medoc county and Klamath county will be assembled at the nearest shipping point and be moved south to San Francisco, where it will be shipped to the east via the Panama canal.

Surety Companies Make Good Thefts Of Former Deputy

SALEM, May 26.—The Fidelity and Deposit company and the American Surety company have paid the state treasury money to cover the shortage caused by the default of Clarence W. Thompson, former cashier, who is now serving nine years in the state penitentiary. Thompson's default covered about $5,000, of which he himself paid back about $1,000.

Many Demand to Withdraw Names

SALEM, May 26.—A new problem relative to referendum petitions confronts Secretary of State Kozes, and has been put up to the Attorney General for solution. This is whether names signed to referendum petitions filed with the secretary of state can be withdrawn by him at the request of the signers. Yesterday he received about 200 postal cards requesting that names be withdrawn from the referendum petitions for the bus bill when these are filed in his office.

The attempted withdrawals were inspired, it is said, by the association of county judges and commissioners who are bitterly fighting the referendum and who sent form post cards to several thousand signers of the petitions requesting that they sign them and send them to the secretary of state.

Big Revision For Grain Rates Pends

WASHINGTON, May 26. (A. P.)—Extensive revision of freight rates on grain and grain products moving from Rocky Mountain territory to the Mississippi river and territory east was recommended to the Interstate Commerce Commission today by its examiners.

After investigating the complaint of Utah producers in which Oregon, Idaho and Washington state advantage over producers in a considerable part of Idaho, Oregon and Utah. The commission was advised that the general rates out of Colorado to the east should be maintained but that the complaining producers in the other states should be given rates to consuming territory measured by additions of from 10 to 20 cents per hundred pounds to the Colorado rates.

At the same time the report suggested that the rates on grains other than wheat should be 90 per cent of wheat rate and that flour rates though the territory had been 110 per cent of the rate on wheat. A second tentative report on grain rates was filed by examiners, proposing that revisions of the schedules to Chicago from a considerable number of Iowa shipping points should be made. The report said that the existing rates are preferential of St. Louis and in part of Kansas City and suggested that a distance scale should be applied to equalize the charges.
