Burke Winner in Mat Bout

Henry Burke of Klamath Falls, holder of the Pacific coast middle-weight wrestling championship, Saturday night demonstrated his right to the belt before an enthusiastic crowd in Moose hall, throwing "Farmer" Vance twice in a fast exhibition.

The first fall was secured with a headlock which left the "Farmer" dizzy. The second was secured with a double toe hold, the agony from which was so great that Vance was forced to tap the canvas in token of surrender.

In the preliminary bout Buzukos scored an easy victory over Jim Fleming. The bout was uninteresting. Buzukos' skill and knowledge of the game so far outshone that of Fleming that the local boy, though willing, looked worse than he really is.

The fault was not with Buzukos, who is a wonderful wrestler, nor with Fleming, who tried, but with the fact that Buzukos' years of experience gave him the edge every move he made.

Buzukos challenged the winner of the Burke-Vance bout and in the event his challenge is accepted by Burke, the resulting match should prove a real one.

Klamath Snowed Under By Weed In Torrid Game

In a torrid game which lasted eleven innings, Klamath Falls' Pellicans were defeated yesterday afternoon by Weed by a score of 5 to 2, as a result of a batting rally staged by the California nine in the first half of the eleventh.

Although he handled the stick with his usual efficiency, it was Noel's low and needless throw to third base that resulted in the first score for Weed.

A Weed man walked and stole second. The next man hit a scorching single to center. Noel scooped up the ball and pegged it to third base in an attempt to pick off the Weed man. The ball was low and the Weed player scooted home while the player who singled skirted the diamond till he reached third. A sacrifice brought him home.

A desperate rally in the last half of the ninth inning resulted in tying the score. The tenth both pitchers were invincible. But the first half of the eleventh, Weed began to connect solidly and heavily. When the smoke cleared Klamath was three runs behind. A belated rally in the last half of the eleventh netted nothing.

S. P. PUBLICITY MEN START WORK

(Continued From Page One) on the activity of the lumber industry. Let anything happen that would shut down our mills or reduce their output and our agricultural products would lose, automatically, a large part of their market.

The relative importance today of the lumber and agricultural industries may be judged best by the transportation records.

Of more than 70,000 car loads of freight handled in 1924 in the district of which Klamath Falls is the center, more than 60,000 carloads were lumber and other forest products. Less than 9,000 carloads were agricultural products. Much of this agricultural produce was shipped to lumber mill points for home consumption.

California takes 70 per cent of the Klamath lumber products. The balance is shipped east. The agricultural products such as are not consumed here and which include wheat, livestock and wool, go to San Francisco, Portland and Eastern points.

Present production is amply cared for by present transportation facilities. The Southern Pacific by the completion of the Natron Cutoff, which will be open for traffic next summer will give Klamath Falls direct connection with Portland and will put Klamath Falls on a main line route with greatly improved and amplified service north and south. It will open to the tourist travel of the world Klamath's beautiful lake district and will break down the frontier that has shut this part of Oregon off by itself.

The Southern Pacific, as announced recently by President William Sproule, has applied for permission to carry out certain additional construction in connection with the Oregon, California and Eastern and the Nevada, California, Oregon Railways which will give Klamath Falls a direct line east; the shortest to Chicago and the great markets of the middle west of any Pacific Coast town of Klamath Falls' importance.

This, with the branch line construction which logically and of necessity must accompany main line extensions into new territory, will insure Klamath Falls and this part of Oregon transportation facilities to take care of all possible development, at the same time preserving for Klamath Falls the important California market for its lumber and giving our farmers protection in their present markets and outlets to new ones.

The proposal of the northern lines to make direct connection between Bend and Klamath Falls will add nothing to Klamath Falls' railroad facilities. It may add to the cost of all transportation and it will give the Bend mills direct access to the California market, a condition that we do not want to come about.

Owing to the conditions under which the lumber industry here is operated, the Bend mills would be in a position either to take away the California market entirely or so cut down the Klamath mill profits that it would amount to the same thing.

The Klamath lumber industry now distributes about $4,500,000 annually in wages and spends $9,000,000 to $10,000,000 a year in this district for supplies.

How would the loss of this regular stream of new money affect your property and your business?

Think it over.

MARION NINE.

BAXTER TAKES POSITION Advertising Man of Wide Experience Takes Up Work

G. L. Baxter, an advertising man of wide experience, today took charge of the advertising department of The Woman's Store. Mr. Baxter will succeed George Barth, who has been with Mr. Moe for the past two years. Mr. Baxter comes here from Los Angeles where he has been located for some time. His experience in advertising takes in a period of some fifteen years.

Mr. Barth has become identified with K. Sugarman and beginning today will have charge of the publicity and window decorating of this well known men's furnishing and shoe store.

OREGON SCHOOL LAW IS INVALID

these questions from the realm of controversy.

"It is a great decision and of nation-wide importance.

"Apparently more interest was manifested in this controversy in the east than in the west."

PORTLAND, Ore., June 1.—The supreme court decision in the Oregon compulsory school law ends three years of fight.

The bill went before the voters in November, 1922, with the support of Scottish Rite Masons, together with the Ku Klux Klan. The compulsory education bill, as it was first known, was introduced as an initiative measure. George B. Ellars and P. S. Malcolm, officers here of the Scottish Rite lodge, and Judge Wallace McCamant, attorney representing the lodge, refrained from commenting on the decision.

Law Attacked

Passage of the bill immediately introduced it to the courts. Hill Military academy, attacked the law as providing for illegal confiscation of property. The society of the Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus and Mary followed with a court action that protested particularly the rights of parents in connection with the religious education of their children.

Since the measure was a state law, it became the duty of the state legal department to defend it. Masonic bodies favoring the law lent the state the services of Wallace McCamant, local attorney and former state supreme justice, who has since been appointed a justice of the United States court of appeals.

The two cases were joined for argument of point of constitutionality by district judges, sitting here as a United States district court. These three judges held the law unconstitutional, as contravening both personal and property rights. From their decision the case was immediately appealed to the United States supreme court.

Argued Separately

In the supreme court the two cases were argued separately. Willis S. Moore, assistant attorney general, presented both cases for the state. J. P. Kavanaugh of Portland and William Gutherie of New York argued for the Catholic societies and George E. Chamberlain, ex-senator from Oregon, former governor of the state, presented the arguments against them. All these arguments dealt with the religious aspects of the case.

John C. Veatch of Portland, appeared for the local military academy and Albert H. Putnay of Washington, D. C., opposed him. This case dealt exclusively with the questions of police power of the state and the confiscation of property under the law.

THE WEATHER

The Cyclo-Stormograph at Underwood's pharmacy has registered but little change in barometric conditions during the last 36 hours and as the reading is low, unsettled conditions will probably prevail.

Forecast for next 24 hours: Cloudy and unsettled with moderate temperatures. Conditions favorable for more rain.

The Tyco recording thermometer registered maximum and minimum temperatures today as follows:

High.....57 Low.....33

U. S. Weather Report

Oregon: Unsettled, probably occasional showers tonight and Tuesday. Light variable winds.

CONFESSION IS HELD BY POLICE

most likely prospect for a really profitable kidnapping.

Plan of Action

Conferences were held at which it was agreed Miss Pickford should be seized while en route from her Hollywood studio to her home; that the kidnapping should be given an up to the minute camouflage by bundling the actress into a car decked with shrine convention banners and hunting so as to give the effect of a merry making ride and the victim held in a secluded house until her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, paid the conspirators $200,000. It was while the matter of selecting a suitable house was still under discussion that police housed the trio in the city jail.
