LOGGING CURTAILED

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 3.—Conditions in the logging industry may be judged from the figures of log production. It was expected that when operations in several of the larger camps were resumed about the first of February that normal output might be maintained. Expectations have not been realized, and a curtailment policy is still in force. Logs scaled in March were 181,981,048 feet, compared with 287,336,874 feet in the same month last year, or 55,345,825 feet less. For the first three months of this year, the cut was 469,626,459 feet, which is 144,419,493 feet less than the amount for the corresponding period a year ago.

Once again The Lumberlogue desires to call attention to the fact that there several more courses still open in the free lumber course which is being given to the men employed in the lumber industry in the Klamath country.

All that is needed is to send your name and address to The Lumberlogue. This course is absolutely without cost and is declared by those who have taken it to be one of the best ever offered by this newspaper.

4L REPORT FOR WEEK IS GIVEN

PORTLAND.—Further and sharp decline in the demand for help from nearly all industries on the West Coast was noted at employment centers last week and labor turnover reached the lowest point of the season, according to the 4L weekly employment service letter published here today. Reports from the various logging districts indicate that many companies are preparing for a shutdown in the near future.

Employment in the pine district east of the Cascades has reached seasonal height, the letter states, and there will be little new work offered there until harvest begins. Condensed reports from the various centers follow:

PORTLAND — Due to a large amount of down logs in the woods and with the seasonal fire hazard approaching, several felling and bucking crews have been laid off at the Long-Bell camp at Ryderwood. Some commercial loggers of the Columbia river and adjacent districts are making preparations to close camps next week. Nearly all Portland sawmills have returned to the six-day week. High water in the Willamette river today caused an enforced shutdown of the Peninsula Lumber company's sawmill here. Calls for mill help are few and there are few experienced millmen now unemployed. Highway work is active and many men who have been laid off at camps have been hired out in road crews, although there are still many unemployed loggers in this city.

ABERDEEN — Two more large camps have laid off fallers and buckers and by June 1, logging will have ceased at 65 per cent of the operations in this district. Labor turnover during the past week was lighter than it has been at any time this year.

TACOMA — Labor turnover has been extremely light and except for short jobs within the city there was little new work offered last week. Tacoma camps and mills quite generally continue the curtailed production basis of operation.

SEATTLE—With the laying off of several more logging crews last week Seattle's unemployed was noticeably increased. The sawmill of the Puget Sound Mills & Timber Co., Port Angeles, has been shut down for an indefinite period. Building and construction in Seattle and district are very active but there are more than enough laborers to fill all needs.

SPOKANE—There is at present a scarcity of skilled pine sawmill help and lumber graders, but a surplus of all other kinds of labor. A majority of the larger sawmills and planers in the Inland Empire are operating two shifts, as is usual at this time of year. Highway crews are well filled. The demand for all kinds of unskilled labor during the past week has been confined to a few replacements.

BEND—Local sawmills are operating two shifts six days per week. Resident mill workers and loggers are well employed. A small amount of highway construction is being done this summer. Several itinerant workers have drifted into Bend recently expecting to get work on the projected railroad lines in Central Oregon. This work will not begin for some time.

KLAMATH FALLS—The sawmills and box factories in this district are busy with the season's cut. A night shift was put on last week at the Big Laces box plant. All of the Pelican Bay camps are running. Lumber shipments for May will total a good high average. Resident woodsmen and sawmill help are well employed.

EAST INDIAN RICE CROP LARGE
THE HAGUE, June 2. (AP)—Reports from Java state that rice will yield a bumper crop this year in the Dutch East Indies. Notwithstanding that thousands of unemployed have deserted the cities to help bring in the crop there is still a dearth of coolie labor.

STEPHENSON VISITS
George Stevenson, well known timberman, accompanied by Mrs. Stevenson, visited in Klamath Falls Saturday and Sunday from Lakeview.

FROM EWAUNA
Carl Lange, head scaler, K. G. Cummings, logging engineer, and his assistant, Bursey Zollman, were in town Monday from Ewauna camp.

We frequently hear the venerable adage "blow your own horn; nobody else will blow it for you." One might as well, in the general sympathy of brass one horn more or less will never be noticed.

Waha Declares Forest Week Is Great Success

Public Becoming More Interested in Fire Protection

This year's observance of American Forest Week was the biggest and best ever held, according to reports which are being received by the District Forester's office, Portland, Oregon. "The week was a very auspicious opening of our summer's forest protection campaign," said Acting District Forester A. O. Waha. "We believe that a large part of the public had brought home to them their individual responsibility for care with fire in the woods. This should result in a substantial reduction of man-caused forest fires this summer, if the lesson isn't forgotten."

Mr. Waha said he attributed much of the success for the Week's campaign to the very effective cooperation given by the newspapers and by leading citizens outside the Forest Service. General arrangements were in charge of state committees headed, in Oregon by State Forester F. A. Elliott and in Washington by Dean Hugo Winkenwerder of the College of Forestry, University of Washington. Local arrangements were largely under the direction of Chambers of Commerce or other civic organizations, with State, Federal and private forestry agencies cooperating.

According to incomplete reports received to date 595 forest protection talks were made by forest officers and local citizens before schools, luncheon clubs and other organizations, reaching an estimated total of 106,340 people. In addition, six radio talks were broadcast during the week; parades and special field day exercises were held at a number of places. Many of the churches devoted special attention to the subject.

The press of Oregon and Washington played an able and important part in the campaign, according to forest officers. The District Forester has been advised to date of 417 articles and news items and 179 editorials, in addition to cartoons, photographs, slogans, fillers and paid advertisements. Several of the larger papers carried special pages or sections.

"While these figures are incomplete and will be materially increased when the final returns are in," said Mr. Waha, "they indicate the increasing interest of the public in forestry. American Forest Week is now accepted as an annual event of nation-wide importance. Steps are being taken to make the national committee, which was organized this year a permanent body. Thus, by starting our campaign in the spring every year, and hammering away at it throughout the summer, we hope to make our American public fire-conscious. We must do this to eliminate our present high percentage of man-caused forest fires."

Perry, Lathell Covell, Elizabeth Gholson and Merle Perry.

Dr. Ford, pastor of the Wildwood Christian church, gave a short talk, as did Mrs. Benson and Mrs. King of the teaching staff. Professor Luttrell gave a short talk, summarizing the year's work and declaring that in his 18 years of experience he had never had a school with which he was so well satisfied.

Tennant is very fortunate to have a teacher like Professor Luttrell, and hopes to have him again this fall. He was unable to state at the end of the term whether or not he would be able to return next year.

Tox King is setting ratchet for the Wheeler-Olmstead company, replacing Joe Smiddle.
