Evening Herald Offers Award For Club Work

A free scholarship to the O. A. C. summer school, 1926, is offered by The Evening Herald as first prize award to the boy or girl who captures the Dairy Calf division II, at the coming county fair. The paper offered a similar scholarship last year for class I, which was won by Anna Burnett of Midland with her grade Holsteins' heifer. Miss Burnett is now at the two-week summer school with the other lucky winners of similar scholarships awarded last fall.

The entrant for this valuable prize, which represents not only the instruction in classes, board, room and transportation for the two-week period at O. A. C., but the distinction of being the best in Klamath county in the care and management of one or more yearling dairy heifers, dropped since August 1, 1923. The club rules for class II, specify that these heifers must be by a registered dairy bull and under the management of the club member for at least six months. A daily record of feed costs, amount of time devoted to the work and the production in milk and butter-fat of these animals is also part of the course.

The exhibits of livestock by girls and boys of Klamath county is one of the most attractive and interesting features of the annual county fair and competition between some of the outstanding young animals and those owned by the grown-ups is at all times keen, with many amusing angles for the crowds that gather around the judging ring when junior and father with their respective entries of calves, poultry, pigs or sheep, compete against each other.

Golf Expert Tells Of "White" Negro

E. L. Nelson, who is here to lay out and build the course for the Klamath Golf and Country club, today received a clipping from a Newton, North Carolina, newspaper, telling of the death of Dolph Setzer, negro who gained national prominence years ago when his skin began turning white.

Mr. Nelson knew the aged negro, as he came from the same part of the state. The clipping follows: Newton's oldest citizen, Dolph Setzer, negro, died last Sunday evening. He was about 95 years old, and was born within the present limits of the corporation, but long before there was any thought of a town. All of Catawba was at that time part of Lincoln county and Dolph was born on the farm of Reuben Setzer.

About 40 years ago he became nationally known, from the fact that at that time, his color, which had been coal black, began turning white in spots. These spots gradually grew until his whole body became white. For the past quarter of a century, any stranger meeting him would have taken him for a white man.

Trappers Will Fight Coyotes

Operations Will Start Here Again Next Week

War on Klamath county coyotes, temporarily called off for awhile this spring, will be resumed in about a week when Emil Gubser of the U. S. Biological survey will begin trapping and poisoning operations in the Lower Klamath Lake region, in the vicinity of Malin and Midland.

Klamath stockmen in that section have sent in reports of a small amount of damage done by marauding coyotes.

"The situation is rather hard to handle in this section," Gubser declared.

"There are practically no measures taken to trap coyotes on the California side of the line, and as we clean up on them in this section more of them immigrate from across the line, seeming to realize that competition is not so keen on this side.

"It is practically impossible to effectively stamp them out in the wilderness of the Lava beds, and that section also provides a good base for their operations."

Two more trappers will be added in a short time.

No wolves have been seen in Klamath county since last year, when the extreme drought drove some down from the mountains in the vicinity of Mount Pitt.

Dry Land Crops In Good Shape

Dry land crops in the Poe Valley section are in much better condition than at any time in recent years.

This is the declaration of County School Superintendent Fred Peterson, who yesterday returned from a tour of that section. Rye, especially, is even in better condition than crops on nearby irrigated lands Mr. Peterson declared.

While in Poe Valley Mr. Peterson inspected work now being done at the Shasta View schoolhouse, where sand dunes which once formed the school yard are being leveled and sown preparatory to irrigating them when the Shasta Vltw project is completed.

WATER CONTRACT IS TURNED DOWN

which the district could not approve, it being understood that these objections were to be forwarded to Washington.

To Demand Payment
Mr. Bradbury stated further that the district would insist that the reclamation bureau take steps to secure payment for the water diverted into the power intake on the old Ankeny canal, it being held by the district that this diversion of water should be paid for, under the provisions of the federal act of February 25, 1920, and the money received from such sale of water placed to the credit of the project.

It is estimated that this water should afford a revenue of approximately $150,000 a year, which would be divided between the Tule lake lands, pumping districts and the Klamath Irrigation district, which would receive about 50 per cent of the proceeds of such sale.

Coat and Slip-Over Styles

There are so many occasions during the summer months when a sweater comes in handy, that it will pay you to select one or two, at this unusually low price.

Advertising is a mighty force in these days—and a force for good—because in the long run only a Good Store or a Good Community can endure the light of publicity; and being good the attraction of a large and growing clientele enables us to make the desired thing or commodity better and better. We would much rather sell you VALUE than price—in selling you value you are getting what you pay for—in selling you price you are paying for what you get—see the difference.

Defense Day To Be Discussed At Tuesday Meeting

Plans for a Defense Day turnout, which it is hoped will exceed even that of last year, will be discussed at a meeting called for Tuesday night by Mayor Goddard. Klamath county reserve officials are asked to attend without exception. National Defense Day, July 4, is expected to be a practical demonstration as to how quickly the available strength of the nation could be mobilized in case of emergency.

SPECIAL AWARD FOR BABY BEEF

Connolly Brothers have supplemented the first prize offered by the First National Bank of $25, for the baby beef class at the coming County Fair, with an award of $10 merchandise order. This is a new division of the livestock exhibits and one that is receiving the utmost encouragement from county and city alike.

Connolly Bros., store, the hub of livestock activities, especially among the stockmen, are anxious to foster this class of exhibit and are proving their support in this substantial manner.

Anyone who doesn't believe Klamath County can show some of the juiciest as well as saucy beefsteaks on the hoof, just wait until the Baby Beef class lines up at the County Fair.
