

Plans All Ready for Big Rodeo Which Starts Thursday; Riders and Broncs Ra'rin for Action

Everything's all set for the big rodeo which starts day after tomorrow and continues until Saturday night. The buckers are all corralled and ready to do their stuff. The relay teams are champing at their bits. The Roman horses are all primed for action, while the cowboys and cowgirls are ready to snap into it just as soon as the starters and judges clear the field for action.

All of the various attractions of a western roundup are billed, with substantial cash prizes up for the winners of the various events. Some of the best riders, ropers, bull doggers and relay teams in the west are here for the competition.

The stores, or most of them, will close from one to five each afternoon of the three days. Crowds are expected here from many points on the coast, and taken altogether, the rodeo promises to be by far the biggest event ever attempted by the Bly Rodeo association.

Interest locally will be at a high pitch as many of the best riders of Klamath county will compete with men of national reputation in the bucking contests and in the other events. The Indian races and the wild horse races likewise will draw a lot of local interest, with many Klamath riders entered in these events.

If the proper public support is given, the rodeo this year will go over with a bang and make it certain that this western exhibition will become a permanent feature in Klamath Falls.

The fairgrounds track and field have been undergoing the needed changes for the various events. Strong fences will protect the public from the horses and steers, and make it possible for everybody to enjoy a safe and pleasurable afternoon on each of the three days.

Lighthouse Missing

The battleship Arkansas experienced some difficulty in finding her way into the harbor before daylight when her navigating officers strained their eyes to locate the Santa Barbara light. The lighthouse had been cut down by the quake.

Ranchers coming into the city this morning reported heavy landslides across the highway fifteen miles north of here, in the direction of Paradise Camp in Santa Ynez valley. They said, however, that no other damage had occurred in that section.

Survey Party Hears Plea of Sheep Owners

Think Lower Lake Will Not Be Re-Flooded

Members of the commission sent here by the government to investigate the proposed flooding of the Lower Klamath lake basin returned yesterday evening to their homes, with indications that their final report would not favor re-flooding the area in question.

Prior to departure of the commission a general meeting was held at which officials of the Klamath Wool Growers' association were present.

Arguments against re-flooding the lake area were presented by Dennis O'Connor, Michael P. Barry, James Lacey, Ned O'Connor and G. L. Holbrook.

These brought out the fact that more than 50,000 head of sheep had wintered in the basin during the feed shortage last year, living on the weeds and grass and emerging in good condition in the spring.

Members of the commission indicated that they would advocate that the basin lands be split up into tracts of not more than 300 acres and that provision be made to install gravity or pumping irrigation systems on these tracts.

G. C. Kreutzer, director of the division of farm economics of the Reclamation Service, will join Elwood Mead and other reclamation officials at Yakima, Wash.

Final report on the matter may not be expected from the reclamation service for some time, in the opinion of A. M. Thomas, secretary of the Klamath Irrigation district, instrumental in calling the meeting between the commission and the sheepmen.
