WEEKLY PANORAMA OF EVENTS IN THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

Herbert Hoover has been added to the Cabinet sick list. The Secretary of Commerce is at his home in California under the care of a physician. His condition is not serious, according to information reaching his friends here, but he is said to have worn himself down in his work in Washington with the result that physicians have ordered him to take an absolute rest for an extended period. Secretary Weeks, who was critically ill a few weeks ago, is now reported on his way to recovery.

This government's efforts in the direction of war debt collections has caused the British government to adopt a similar course. Among the nations to which Great Britain has addressed a gun is France, which owes the United States four billion dollars. In some quarters it is feared that the British action may complicate a possible adjustment with the French, who are adjusting their internal finances with a view to sending a debt commission to Washington. The Italian debt funding negotiations here have adjourned until August with only small progress being made.

lands in South America. De Urbina is about fifteen years younger than his wife, who said she married him "out of pity" but is now through with him.

Secretary of Labor Davis is to represent the cabinet in Europe this summer and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has elected to stick close to Washington to watch out for debt negotiations. Davis will investigate conditions abroad in addition to going on a pleasure trip on the continent and calling on his old friend, Alex Moore, now the ambassador at Madrid. This was the first summer, for many years, that Secretary Mellon has not gone to Europe, he will spend much of his time during the hot months at South Hampton, Long Island, where he has a summer home.

Edward L. Doheny's lengthy defense in the New York Times against the government's conspiracy charges against him in connection with his California oil leases has aroused widespread comment here, but is not expected to change the status of the civil and criminal cases which the government has instituted against Doheny and his oil companies. In copyrighted articles in the New York paper Doheny declared that the United States was fearful of getting into war with Japan and this led to the contract to build oil storage tanks in Hawaii. According to government officials, any possible fear of war was removed by the Washington Armament conference before the Doheny contract was concluded and that the war scare talk brought out in the Senate oil investigation was never regarded seriously.

The government ended the fiscal year of 1924-25 with a quarter of a billion dollars more of the people's money than was needed for operating expenses. The surplus will be retained in the treasury as a basis for the tax reduction which the administration has already promised and which will be urged to congress in December. The amount left over was $50,000,000 more than had been estimated a few weeks ago by treasury officials. Receipts from all sources, however, exceed early calculations. A suggestion is being made in congressional circles for a law providing for automatic pro rate refund to taxpayers at the end of every year in which a surplus is accumulated in the treasury. That this could be done by the treasury was shown when the 25 per cent income tax rebates were paid last year by order of congress.
